*FOR the Song's sake; even so:
Humor it, and let it go
All untamed and wild of wing—
Leave it ever truanting.*

*Be its flight elusive!—Lo,
For the Song's sake—even so.—
Yield it but an ear as kind
As thou perkest to the wind.*

*Who will name us what the seas
Have sung on for centuries?
For the Song's sake! Even so—
Sing, O Seas! and Breezes, blow!*

*Sing! or Wave or Wind or Bird—
Sing! nor ever afterward
Clear thy meaning to us—No!—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

ACT I.

SCENE—THE FLYING ISLANDS.

SCENE I. Spirkland. Time, Moondawn. Interior Court of KRUNG. A vast, pendent star burns dimly in dome above throne. CRESTILLOMEEM discovered languidly reclining at foot of empty throne, an overturned goblet lying near, as though just drained. The Queen, in seeming dazed, ecstatic state, raptly gazing upward, listening. Swarming forms and features in air above, seen eerily coming and going, blending and intermingling in domed ceiling-spaces of court. Weird music. Mystic, luminous, beautiful faces detached from

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

swarm, float, singly, forward,—tremulously, and in succession, poising in mid-air and chanting.

FIRST FACE.

And who hath known her—like as I
Have known her?—since the envying sky
Filched from her cheeks its morning-hue,
And from her eyes its glory, too,
Of dazzling shine and diamond-dew.

SECOND FACE.

I knew her—long and long before
High Æo loosed her palm and thought:
“What awful splendor have I wrought
To dazzle earth and Heaven, too!”

THIRD FACE.

I knew her—long ere Night was o’er—
Ere Æo yet conjectured what
To fashion Day of—ay, before
He sprinkled stars across the floor

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Of dark, and swept that form of mine,
E'en as a fleck of blinded shine,
Back to the black where light was not.

FOURTH FACE.

Ere day was dreamt, I saw her face
Lift from some starry hiding-place
Where our old moon was kneeling while
She lit its features with her smile.

FIFTH FACE.

I knew her while these islands yet
Were nestlings—ere they feathered wing,
Or e'en could gape with them or get
Apoise the laziest-ambling breeze,
Or cheep, chirp out, or anything!
When Time crooned rhymes of nurseries
Above them—nodded, dozed and slept,
And knew it not, till, wakening,
The morning-stars agreed to sing
And Heaven's first tender dewes were wept.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

SIXTH FACE.

I knew her when the jealous hands
Of Angels set her sculptured form
Upon a pedestal of storm
And let her to this land with strands
Of twisted lightnings.

SEVENTH FACE.

And I heard
Her voice ere she could tone a word
Of any but the Seraph-tongue.—
And O sad-sweeter than all sung-
Or word-said things!—to hear her say,
Between the tears she dashed away:—
“Lo, launched from the offended sight
Of Æo!—anguish infinite
Is ours, O Sisterhood of Sin!
Yet is thy service mine by right,
And, sweet as I may rule it, thus
Shall Sin’s myrrh-savor taste to us—
Sin’s Empress—let my reign begin!”

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

CHORUS OF SWARMING FACES.

We follow thee forever on!

Thro' darkest night and dimmest dawn;

Thro' storm and calm—thro' shower and shine,

Hear thou our voices answering thine:

We follow—craving but to be

Thy followers.—We follow thee—

We follow, follow, follow thee!

We follow ever on and on—

O'er hill and hollow, brake and lawn;

Thro' grewsome vale and dread ravine

Where light of day is never seen.—

We waver not in loyalty,—

Unfaltering we follow thee—

We follow, follow, follow thee!

We follow ever on and on!

The shroud of night around us drawn,

Though wet with mists, is wild-ashine

With stars to light that path of thine;—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

The glow-worms, too, befriend us—we Shall fail not as we follow thee.
We follow, follow, follow thee!

We follow ever on and on.—
The notched reeds we pipe upon
Are piped with music, keener blown
And blither where thou leadest lone—
Glad pangs of its ecstatic glee
Shall reach thee as we follow thee.
We follow, follow, follow thee!

We follow ever on and on :
We know the ways thy feet have gone,—
The grass is greener, and the bloom
Of roses richer in perfume—
And birds of every blooming tree
Sing sweeter as we follow thee.
We follow, follow, follow thee!

We follow ever on and on ;
For wheresoever thou hast gone

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

We hasten joyous, knowing there
Is sweeter sin than elsewhere—

Leave still its latest cup, that we May drain it as we follow thee.

We follow, follow, follow thee!

[Throughout final stanzas, faces, in fore- and forms in background slowly vanish, and voices gradually fail to sheer silence.—CRESTILLOMEEM, rising, and wistfully gazing and listening; then, evidently regaining wonted self, looks to be assured of being wholly alone—then speaks.]

CRESTILLOMEEM.

The Throne is throwing wide its gilded arms
To welcome me. The Throne of Krung! Ha! ha!

Leap up, ye lazy echoes, and laugh loud!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

For I, Crestillomeem, the Queen—ha! ha!
Do fling my richest mirth into your mouths
That ye may fatten ripe with mockery!
I marvel what the kingdom would become
Were I not here to nurse it like a babe
And dandle it above the reach and clutch
Of intermeddlers in the royal line
And their attendant serfs. Ho! Jucklet, ho!
'Tis time my knarlèd warp of nice anatomy
Were here, to weave us on upon our mesh
Of silken villanies. Ho! Jucklet, ho!

[Lifts secret door in pave and drops a star-bud through opening. Enter JUCKLET from below.]

JUCKLET.

Spang sprit! my gracious Queen! but thou hast scorched
My left ear to a cinder! and my head

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Rings like a ding-dong on the coast of death!
For, patient hate! thy hasty signal burst
Full in my face as hitherward I came!
But though my lug be fried to crisp, and my Singed wig stinks like a little sun-stewed Wunk,
I stretch my fragrant presence at thy feet
And kiss thy sandal with a blistered lip.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Hold! rare-done fool, lest I may bid the cook
To bake thee brown! How fares the King by this?

JUCKLET.

Safe couched midmost his lordly hoard of books,
I left him sleeping like a quinsied babe
Next the guest-chamber of a poor man's house:
But ere I came away, to rest mine ears,
I salved his welded lids, uncorked his nose,
And o'er the odorous blossom of his lips

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Re-squeezed the tinctured sponge, and felt his pulse

Come staggering back to regularity.

And four hours hence his Highness will awake

And Peace will take a nap!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Ha! What mean you?

JUCKLET. [Ominously.]

I mean that he suspects our knaveries.—

Some covert spy is burrowed in the court—

Nay, and I pray thee startle not aloud,

But mute thy very heart in its out-throb,

And let the blanching of thy cheeks but be

A whispering sort of pallor!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

A spy?—Here?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

JUCKLET.

Ay, here—and haply even now. And one
Whose unseen eye seems ever focussed keen
Upon our action, and whose hungering ear
Eats every crumb of counsel that we drop
In these our secret interviews!—For he—
The King—through all his talking-sleep to-day
Hath jabbered of intrigue, conspiracy—
Of treachery and hate in fellowship,
With dire designs upon his royal bulk,
To oust it from the Throne.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

He spake my name?

JUCKLET.

O Queen, he speaks not ever but thy name
Makes melody of every sentence.—Yea,
He thinks thee even true to him as thou
Art fickle, false and subtle! O how blind

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

And lame, and deaf and dumb, and worn and weak,

And faint, and sick, and all-commodious
His dear love is! In sooth, O wifely one,
Thy malleable spouse doth mind me of
That pliant hero of the bald old catch
“The Lovely Husband.”—Shall I wreak the thing?

[Sings—with much affected gravity and grimace.]

O a lovely husband he was known,
He loved his wife and her a-lone;
She reaped the harvest he had sown;
She ate the meat; he picked the bone.

With mixed admirers every size,
She smiled on each without disguise;
This lovely husband closed his eyes
Lest he might take her by surprise.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

[Aside, exclamatory.]

Chorious uprorious!

[Then pantomime as though pulling at bell-rope—singing in pent, explosive utterance.]

Trot!

Run!

Wasn't he a handy hubby?

What

Fun

She could plot and plan!

Not

One

Other such a dandy hubby

As this lovely man!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Or talk or tune, wilt thou wind up thy tongue

Nor let it tangle in a knot of words!

What said the King?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

JUCKLET. [With recovered reverence.]

He said: "Crestillomeem—
O that she knew this thick distress of mine!—
Her counsel would anoint me and her voice
Would flow in limpid wisdom o'er my woes
And, like a love-balm, lave my secret grief
And lull my sleepless heart!" [Aside] And so went on,
Struggling all maudlin in the wrangled web
That well-nigh hath cocooned him!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Did he yield
No hint of this mysterious distress
He needs must hold sequestered from his Queen?
What said he in his talking-sleep by which Some clew were gained of how and when and whence
His trouble came?

JUCKLET.

In one strange phase he spake
As though some sprited lady talked with him.—
Full courteously he said: “In woman’s guise
Thou comest, yet I think thou art, in sooth,
But woman in thy form.—Thy words are strange
And leave me mystified. I feel the truth
Of all thou hast declared, and yet so vague
And shadow-like thy meaning is to me,
I know not how to act to ward the blow
Thou sayest is hanging o’er me even now.”
And then, with open hands held pleadingly,
He asked, “Who is my foe?”—And o’er his face
A sudden pallor flashed, like death itself,
As though, if answer had been given, it
Had fallen like a curse.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

CRESTILLOMEEM.

I'll stake my soul
Thrice over in the grinning teeth of doom,
'Tis Dwainie of the Wunks who peeks and peers
With those fine eyes of hers in our affairs
And carries Krung, in some disguise, these hints
Of our intent! See thou that silence falls
Forever on her lips, and that the sight
She wastes upon our secret action blurs
With gray and grisly scum that shall for aye
Conceal us from her gaze while she writhes blind
And fangless as the fat worms of the grave!
Here! take this tuft of downy druze, and when
Thou comest on her, fronting full and fair,
Say "Sherzham!" thrice, and fluff it in her face.

JUCKLET.

Thou knowest scanty magic, O my Queen,
But all thou dost is fairly excellent—

An this charm work, thou shalt have fuller faith
Than still I must withhold.

[Takes charm, with extravagant salutation.]

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Thou gibing knave!

Thou thing! Dost dare to name my sorcery
As any trifling gift? Behold what might Be thine an thy deserving wavered not
In stable and abiding service to Thy Queen!

[She presses suddenly her palm upon his eyes, then lifts her softly opening hand upward, his gaze following, where, slowly shaping in the air above them, appears semblance—or counter-self—of CRESTILLOMEEM, clothed in most radiant youth, her maiden-face bent downward to a moon-lit sward, where kneels a lover-knight—flawless in manly symmetry and princely beauty,—yet none other than the counter-self of JUCKLET, eerily and with strange sweetness singing, to some curiously tinkling instrument, the praises of its queenly mistress: JUCKLET and CRESTILLOMEEM transfixed below—trancedly gazing on their mystic selves above.]

SEMBLANCE OF JUCKLET. [Sings.]

Crestillomeem!

Crestillomeem!

Soul of my slumber!—Dream of my dream!

Moonlight may fall not as goldenly fair

As falls the gold of thine opulent hair—

Nay, nor the starlight as dazzlingly gleam

As gleam thine eyes, 'Meema—Crestillomeem!—

Stars of the skies, 'Meema-

Crestillomeem!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

SEMBLANCE OF CRESTILLOMEEM. [Sings.]

O Prince divine!

O Prince divine!

Tempt thou me not with that sweet voice of thine!

Though my proud brow bear the blaze of a crown,

Lo, at thy feet must its glory bow down,

That from the dust thou mayest lift me to shine

Heaven'd in thy heart's rapture, O Prince divine!—

Queen of thy love ever,

O Prince divine!

SEMBLANCE OF JUCKLET. [Sings.]

Crestillomeem!

Crestillomeem!

Our life shall flow as a musical stream—

Windingly —placidly on shall it wend,

Marged with mazhoora-bloom banks without end—

Word-birds shall call thee and dreamily scream,

“Where dost thou cruise,’ Meema—Crestillomeem?

Whither away, ’ Meema?—

Crestillomeem!”

Duo.

[Vision and voices gradually failing away.]

Crestillomeem!

Crestillomeem!

Soul of my slumber!—Dream of my dream!

Star of Love's light, 'Meema—Crestillomeem!

Crescent of Night, 'Mcema!—

Crestillomeem!

[With song, vision likewise fails utterly.]

CRESTILLOMEEM.

[To JUCKLET, still trancedly staring upward.]

How now, thy clabber-brainèd spudge!—
Thou squelk!—thou—

JUCKLET.

Nay, O Queen! contort me not
To more condensèd littleness than now
My shamèd frame incurreth on itself,

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Seeing what might fare with it, didst thou will Kindly to nip it with thy magic here
And leave it living in that form i' the air,
Forever pranking o'er the daisied sward
In wake of sandal-prints that dint the dew
As lightly as, in thy late maidenhood,
Thine own must needs have done in fighting from
The dread encroachments of the King.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Nay—peace!

JUCKLET.

So be it, O sweet Mystic.—But I crave
One service of thy magic yet.—Amphine!—
Breed me some special, damnèd philter for Amphine—the fair Amphine!—to chuck it him,
Some serenade-tide, in a sodden slug
O' pastry, 'twixt the door-crack and a screech
O' rusty hinges.—Hey! Amphine, the fair!—
And let me, too, elect his doom, O Queen!—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Listed against thee, he, too, doubtless hath
Been favored with an outline of our scheme.—
And I would kick my soul all over hell
If I might juggle his fine figure up
In such a shape as mine!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Then this:—When thou
Canst come upon him bent above a flower,
Or any blooming thing, and thou, arear,
Shalt reach it first and, thwartwise, touch it fair,
And with thy knuckle flick him on the knee,—
Then—his fine form will shrink and shrivel up
As warty as a toad's—so hideous,
Thine own shall seem a marvel of rare grace!
Though idly speak'st thou of my mystic skill,
'Twas that which won the King for me;—'twas that Bereft him of his daughter ere we had Been wedded yet a haed:—She strangely went

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Astray one moonset from the palace-steps—
She went—nor yet returned.—Was it not strange?—

She would be wedded to an alien prince
The morrow midnight—to a prince whose sire
I once knew, in lost hours of lute and song,
When he was but a prince—I but a mouth
For him to lift up sippingly and drain
To lees most ultimate of stammering sobs
And maudlin wanderings of blinded breath.

JUCKLET. [Aside.]

Twigg-brebblets! but her Majesty hath speech
That doth bejuice all metaphor to drip
And spray and mist of sweetness!

CRESTILLOMEEM. [Confusedly.]

Where was I?
O, ay!—The princess went—she strangely went!—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

E'en as I dreamed her lover-princeling would
As strangely go, were she not soon restored.—
As so he did:—That airy penalty
The jocund Fates provide our love-lorn wights
In this glad island: So for thrice three nights
They spun the prince his line and marked him pay

It out (despite all warnings of his doom)
In fast and sleepless search for her—and then
They tripped his fumbling feet and he fell—
UP!—

Up!—as 'tis writ—sheer past Heaven's flinch-ing walls

And topmost cornices.—Up—up and on!—
And, it is grimly guessed of those who thus
For such a term bemoan an absent love,
And so fall *up*wise, they must needs fall on—
And on and on—and on—and on—and on!
Ha! ha!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

JUCKLET.

Quahh! but the prince's holden breath
Must ache his throat by this! But, O my Queen,
What of the princess?—and—

CRESTILLOMEEM.

The princess?—Ay—

The princess! Ay, she went—she strangely went!

And when the dainty vagrant came not back—
Both sire and son in apprehensive throes
Of royal grief—the very Throne befogged
In sighs and tears!—when all hope waned at last,

And all the spies of Spirkland, in her quest,
Came straggling empty-handed home again,—
Why, then the wise King sleeved his rainy eyes
And sagely thought the pretty princess had
Strayed to the island's edge and tumbled off.
I could have edged his mind at ease on that—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

I could have told him,—yea, she tumbled off—
I tumbled her!—and tumbled her so plump,
She tumbled in an under-island, then
Just slow-unmooring from our own and poised
For unknown voyagings of flight afar
And all remote of latitudes of ours.—
Ay, into that land I tumbled her from which
But one charm known to art can tumble her Back into this,—and that charm (guilt be praised!)
Is lodged not in the wit nor the desire
Of my rare lore.

JUCKLET.

Thereinasmuch find joy!
But dost thou know that rumors flutter now
Among thy subjects of thy sorceries?—
The art being banned, thou knowest; or, unhoused,
Is unleashed pitilessly by the grim,

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Facetious body of the dridular
Upon the one who fain had loosed the curse
On others.—An my counsel be worth aught,
Then have a care thy spells do not revert
Upon thyself, nor yet mine own poor hulk
O' fearsomeness!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Ha! ha! No vaguest need
Of apprehension there!—While Krung remains—

[She abruptly pauses—startled first, then listening curiously and with awed interest. Voice of exquisite melodiousness and fervor heard singing.]

VOICE.

When kings are kings, and kings are men—
And the lonesome rain is raining!—
O who shall rule from the red throne then,
And who shall covet the sceptre when—
When the winds are all complaining?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

When men are men, and men are kings—
 And the lonesome rain is raining!—
O who shall list as the minstrel sings
Of the crown's fiat, or the signet-ring's,
 When the winds are all complaining?

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Whence flows such sweetness, and what voice is that?

JUCKLET.

The voice of Spraivoll, an mine ears be whet
And honéd o' late honyéd memories
Behaunted the deserted purlieus of
The court.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

And who is Spraivoll, and what song
Is that besung so blinding exquisite
O cadenced mystery?

JUCKLET.

Spraivoll—O Queen,—

Spraivoll The Tune-Fool is she named
By those who meet her ere the day long wanes
And naught but janiteering sparsely frets
The cushioned silences and stagnant dusts Indifferently resuscitated by
The drowsy varlets in mock servitude
Of so refurbishing the royal halls:
She cometh, alien, from Wunkland—so
Hath she deposed to divers questioners
Who have been smitten of her voice—as rich
In melody as she is poor in caste and intellect.
She hath been roosting, pitied of the hinds
And scullions, round about the palace here
For half a node.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

And pray, where is she perched—
This wild-bird woman with her wondrous throat?

JUCKLET.

Under some dingy cornice, like enough—
 Though wild-bird she is not, being plumèd in,
 Not feathers, but one fustioned stole—the like
 Of which so shameth her fair face one needs
 Must swear some lusty oaths, but that they shape
 Themselves full gentlewise in mildest prayer:—
 Not wild-bird;—nay, nor woman—though, in truth,
 She ith a licensed idiot, and drifts
 About, as restless and as useless, too,
 As any lazy breeze in summer-time.
 I'll call her forth to greet your Majesty.
 Ho! Sprairoll! Ho! my twittering birdster, flit
 Thou hither.

[Enter SPRAIVOLL—from behind group of statuary—singing.]

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

SPRAIVOLL.

Ting-aling! Ling-ting! Tingle-tee!
The moon spins round and round for me!
Wind it up with a golden key.
Ting-aling! Ling-ting! Tingle-tee!

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Who art thou, and what the strange
Elusive beauty and intent of thy Sweet song? What singest thou, vague, mystic-bird—
What doth the Tune-Fool sing? Ay, sing me what.

SPRAIVOLL. [Singing.]

What sings the breene on the wertling-vine,
And the tweck on the bamner-stem?
Their song, to me, is the same as mine,
As mine is the same to them—to them—
As mine is the same to them.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

In star-starved glooms where the plustre looms
With its slender boughs above,
Their song sprays down with the fragrant blossoms,—
And the song they sing is love—is love—
And the song they sing is love.

JUCKLET.

Your Majesty may be surprised somewhat,
But Sprairoll cannot talk,—her only mode
Of speech is melody; and thou might'st put
The dowered fool a thousand queries, and,
In like return, receive a thousand songs,
All set to different tunes—as full of naught
As space is full of emptiness.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

A fool?—
And with a gift so all-divine!—A fool?

JUCKLET.

Ay, warranted!—The Flying Islands all
Might flock in mighty counsel—moult, and shake
Their loosened feathers, and sort every tuft,
Nor ever most minutely quarry there
One other Spraivoll, itching with her voice
Such favored spot of cuticle as she Alone selects here in our blissful realm.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Out, jester, on thy cumbrous wordiness!
Come hither, Tune-Fool, and be not afraid,
For I like fools so well I married one:
And since thou art a Queen of fools, and he
A King, why, I've a mind to bring ye two Together in some wise. Canst use thy song
All times in such entrancing spirit one
Who lists must so needs list, e'en though the song
Go on unceasingly indefinite?

SPRAIVOLL. [Singing.]

If one should ask me for a song,
Then I should answer, and my tongue
Would twitter, trill and troll along
Until the song were done.

Or should one ask me for my tongue,
And I should answer with a song,
I'd trill it till the song were sung,
And troll it all along.

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Thou art indeed a fool, and one, I think,
To serve my present purposes. Give ear.—
And Jucklet, thou, go to the King and bide
His waking: then repeat these words:—“The

Queen

*Impatiently awaits his Majesty,
And craves his presence in the Tower of Stars,
That she may there express full tenderly*

Her great solicitude." And then, end thus,—
"So much she bade, and drooped her glowing face
Deep in the showerings of her golden hair,
And with a flashing gesture of her arm
Turned all the moonlight pallid, saying,
'Haste!'"

JUCKLET.

And would it not be well to hang a pearl
Or twain upon thy silken lashes?

CRESTILLOMEEM.

Go!

JUCKLET. [Exit, singing.]

This lovely husband's loyal breast
Heaved only as she might suggest,—
To every whimsy she expressed
He proudly bowed and acquiesced.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

He plotted with her, blithe and gay—
In no flirtation said her nay,—
He even took her to the play,
Excused himself and came away.

CRESTILLOMEEM. [To Spraivoll.]

Now, Tune-Fool, junior, let me theme thee for A song:—An Empress once, with angel in
Her face and devil in her heart, had wish
To breed confusion to her sovereign lord,
And work the downfall of his haughty son—
The issue of a former marriage—who
Bellowsed her hatred to the whitest heat,
For that her own son, by a former lord,
Was born a hideous dwarf, and reared aside
From the sire's knowing or his princely own—
That none, in sooth, might ever chance to guess
The hapless mother of the hapless child.
The Fiends that scar her thus, protect her still
With outward beauty of both face and form.—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

It so is written, and so must remain
Till magic greater than their own is found
To hurl against her. So is she secure
And proof above all fear. Now, listen well!—
Her present lord is haunted with a dream,
That he is soon to pass, and so prepares
(All havoc hath been wrangled with the drugs!)
The Throne for the ascension of the son,
His cursèd heir, who still doth baffle all
Her arts against him, e'en as though he were Protected by a skill beyond her own.
Soh! she, the Queen, doth rule the King in all
Save this affectionate perversity
Of favor for the son whom he would raise
To his own place.—And but for this the King
Long since had tasted death and kissed his fate
As one might kiss a bride! But so his Queen
Must needs withhold, not deal, the final blow,
She yet doth bind him, spelled, still trusting her;
And, by her craft and wanton flatteries,
Doth sway his love to every purpose but

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

The one most coveted.—And for this end
She would make use of thee;—and if thou dost
Her will, as her good pleasure shall direct,
Why, thou shalt sing at court, in silken tire,
Thy brow bound with wild diamonds, and thy hair
Sown with such gems as laugh hysteric lights
From glittering quespar, guenk and plennocynth,—
Ay, even panoplied as might the fair
Form of a very princess be, thy voice
Shall woo the echoes of the listening Throne.

SPRAIVOLL. [Crooning abstractedly.]

And O! shall one—high brother of the air,
In deeps of space—shall he have dream as fair?—
And shall that dream be this?—In some strange place
Of long-lost lands he finds her waiting face—
Comes marvelling upon it, unaware,
Set moonwise in the midnight of her hair,
And is behaunted with old nights of May,
So his glad lips do purl a roundelay

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Purloinèd from the echo-triller's beak,
Seen keenly notching at some star's blanch cheek
With its ecstatic twitterings, through dusk
And sheen of dewy boughs of bloom and musk.
For him, Love, light again the eyes of her
That show nor tears nor laughter nor surprise—
For him undim their glamour and the blur
Of dreams drawn from the depths of deepest skies.
He doth not know if any lily blows
As fair of feature, nor of any rose.

CRESTILLOMEEM. [Aside.]

O this weird woman! she doth drug mine ears
With her uncanny sumptuousness of song!
[To Spraiivoll.] Nay, nay! Give o'er thy tuneful maunderings
And mark me further, Tune-Fool—ay, and well:—
At present doth the King lie in a sleep
Drug-wrought and deep as death—the after-phase
Of an unconscious state, in which each act
Of his throughout his waking hours is so

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Rehearsed, in manner, motion, deed and word,
Her spies (the Queen's) that watch him, serving there

As guardians o'er his royal slumbers, may
Inform her of her lord's most secret thought.
And lo, her plans have ripened even now
Till, should he come upon his Throne to-night,
Where eagerly his counsellors will bide
His coming,—she, the Queen, hath reason to Suspect her long-designed purposes
May fall in jeopardy;—but if he fail,
Through any means, to lend his presence there,—
Then, by a wheedled mandate, is his Queen
Empowered with all Sovereignty to reign
And work the royal purposes instead.

Therefore, the Queen hath set an interview—
A conference to be holden with the King,
Which is ordained to fall on noon to-night,
Twelve star-twirls ere the nick the Throne convenes.—

And with her thou shalt go, and bide in wait

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Until she signal thee to sing; and then
Shalt thou so work upon his mellow mood
With that un-Spirkly magic of thy voice—
So all bedaze his waking thought with dreams,—
The Queen may, all unnoticed, slip away,
And leave thee singing to a throneless King.

SPRAIVOLL. [Singing.]

And who shall sing for the haughty son
While the good King droops his head?—
And will he dream, when the song is done,
That a princess fair lies dead?

CRESTILLOMEEM.

The haughty son hath found his "Song"—sweet curse!

And may she sing his everlasting dirge!
She comes from that near-floating land of thine,
Naming herself a princess of that realm
So strangely peopled we would fain evade

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

All mergence, and remain as strange to them
As they to us. No less this Dwainie hath
Most sinuously writhed and lithed her way
Into court-favor here—hath glidden past
The King's encharmèd sight and sleeked herself
Within the very altars of his house—
His line—his blood—his very life:—AMPHINE!
Not any Spirkland gentlemaiden might Aspire so high as she hath dared to dare!—
For she, with her fair skin and finer ways,
And beauty second only to the Queen's,
Hath caught the prince betwixt her mellow palms
And stroked him flutterless. Didst ever thou
In thy land hear of Dwainie of the Wunks?

SPRAIVOLL. [Singing.]

Ay, Dwainie!—My Dwainie!

The lurloo ever sings,

A tremor in his flossy crest

And in his glossy wings.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

And Dwainie!—My Dwainie!

The winno-welvers call;—

But Dwainie hides in Spirkland

And answers not at all.

The teeper twitters Dwainie!—

The tcheucker on his spray

Teeters up and down the wind

And will not fly away:

And Dwainie!—My Dwainie!

The drowsy oovers drawl;—

But Dwainie hides in Spirkland

And answers not at all.

O Dwainie!—My Dwainie!

The breezes hold their breath—

The stars are pale as blossoms,

And the night is still as death;

And Dwainie!—My Dwainie!

The fainting echoes fall;—

But Dwainie hides in Spirkland

And answers not at all.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

CRESTILLOMEEM.

A melody ecstatic! and—thy words,
Although so meaningless, seem something more—
A vague and shadowy something, eerie-like,
That maketh one to shiver over-chilled
With curious, creeping sweetnesss of pain
And catching breaths that flutter tremulous
With sighs that dry the throat out icily.—
But save thy music! Come! that I may make Thee ready for thy royal auditor. [Exeunt.]

END ACT I.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A garden of KRUNG'S Palace, screened from the moon with netted glenck-vines and blooming zhoomer-boughs, all glimmeringly lighted with star-flakes. An arbor, near which is a table spread with a repast—two seats, drawn either side. A playing fountain, at marge of which AMPHINE sits thrumming a trentoraine.

AMPHINE. [Improvising.]

Ah, help me! but her face and brow
Are lovelier than lilies are
Beneath the light of moon and star
That smile as they are smiling now—
White lilies in a pallid swoon
Of sweetest white beneath the moon—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

White lilies in a flood of bright
Pure lucidness of liquid-light
Cascading down some plenilune
When all the azure overhead
Blooms like a dazzling daisy-bed.—
So luminous her face and brow
The lustre of their glory, shed
In memory, even, blinds me now.

[Plaintively addressing instrument.]

O warbling strand of silver, where, O where Hast thou unravelled that sweet voice of thine
And left its silken murmurs quavering
In limp thrills of delight? O golden wire,
Where hast thou spilled thy precious twinkings?—

What thirsty ear hath drained thy melody,
And left me but a wild, delirious drop
To tincture all my soul with vain desire?

[Improvising.]

Her face—her brow—her hair unfurled!—
And O the oval chin below,
Carved, like a cunning cameo,
With one exquisite dimple, swirled
With swimming shine and shade, and whirled
The daintiest vortex poets know—
The sweetest whirlpool ever twirled
By Cupid's finger-tip,—and so,
The deadliest maelstrom in the world.

[Pauses.—Enter DWAINIE, behind, in upper bower, unperceived.]

AMPHINE. [Again addressing instrument.]

O Trentoraine! how like an emptied vase
Thou art—whose clustering blooms of song have drooped
And faded, one by one, and fallen away
And left to me but dry and tuneless stems

And crisp and withered tendrils of a voice
Whose thrilling tone, now like a throttled sound,
Lies stifled, faint, and gasping all in vain
For utterance.

[Again improvising.]

And O mad wars of blinding blurs
And flashings of lance-blades of light,
Whet glitteringly athwart the sight
That dares confront those eyes of hers!
Let any dewdrop soak the hue
Of any violet through and through,
And then be colorless and dull,
Compared with eyes so beautiful!
I swear ye that her eyes be bright
As noonday, yet as dark as night—
As bright as be the burnished bars
Of rainbows set in sunny skies,
And yet as deep and dark, her eyes,
And lustrous black as blown-out stars.

[Pauses—DWAINIE still unperceived, radiantly smiling and wafting kisses down from trellis-window above.]

AMPHINE. [Again to instrument.]

O empty husk of song!

If deep within my heart the music thou
Hast stored away might find an issuance,
A fount of limpid laughter would leap up
And gurgle from my lips, and all the winds
Would revel with it, riotous with joy;
And Dwainie, in her beauty, would lean o'er
The battlements of night, and, like the moon,
The glory of her face would light the world—
For I would sing of love.

DWAINIE.

And she would hear,—
And, reaching overhead among the stars,
Would scatter them like daisies at thy feet.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

AMPHINE.

O voice, where art thou floating on the air?—
O Seraph-soul, where art thou hovering?

DWAINIE.

I hover in the zephyr of thy sighs,
And tremble lest thy love for me shall fail
To buoy me thus forever on the breath
Of such a dream as Heaven envies.

AMPHINE.

Ah!

[*Turning, discovers DWAINIE — she feigning, still, invisibility, while he, with lifted eyes and wistful gaze, preludes with instrument
—then sings.*]

Linger, My Dwainie! Dwainie, lily-fair,
Stay yet thy step upon the casement-stair—
Poised be thy slipper-tip as is the tine
Of some still star.—Ah, Dwainie—Dwainie mine,
Yet linger—linger there!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Thy face, O Dwainie, lily-pure and fair,
Gleams i' the dusk, as in thy dusky hair
The moony zhoomer glimmers, or the shine
Of thy swift smile.—Ah, Dwainie—Dwainie mine,
Yet linger—linger there!

With lifted wrist, wheraround the laughing air
Hath blown a mist of lawn and clasped it there,
Waft finger-thipt adieus that spray the wine
Of thy waste kisses to'rd me, Dwainie mine—
Yet linger—linger there!

What unloosed splendor is there may compare
With thy hand's unfurled glory, anywhere?
What glint of dazzling dew or jewel fine
May mate thine eyes?—Ah, Dwainie—Dwainie mine!
Yet linger—linger there!

My soul comforts thee: On thy brow and hair
It lays its tenderness like palms of prayer—
It touches sacredly those lips of thine
And swoons across thy spirit, Dwainie mine,
The while thou lingerest there.

[Drops trentoraine, and, with open arms, gazes yearningly on DWAINIE.]

DWAINIE. [Raptly.]

Thy words do wing my being dovewise!

AMPHINE.

Then,

Thou lovest!—O my homing dove, veer down
And nestle in the warm home of my breast!
So empty are mine arms, so full my heart,
The one must hold thee, or the other burst.

DWAINIE. [Throwing herself in his embrace.]

Æo's own hand methinks hath flung me here:
O hold me that He may not pluck me back!

AMPHINE.

So closely will I hold thee that not e'en
The hand of death shall separate us.

DWAINIE.

So

May sweet death find us, then, that, woven thus
In the corollo of a ripe caress,
We may drop lightly, like twin plustre-buds,
On Heaven's star-strewn lawn.

AMPHINE.

So do I pray.

But tell me, tender heart, an thou dost love,
Where hast thou loitered for so long?—for thou
Didst promise tryst here with me earlier by
Some several layodemes which I have told
Full chafingly against my finger-tips
Till the full complement, save three, are ranged Thy pitiless accusers, claiming, each,

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

So many as their joinèd number be
Shalt thou so many times lift up thy lips
For mine's most lingering forgiveness.
So, save thee, O my Sweet! and rest thee, I
Have ordered merl and viands to be brought
For our refreshment here, where, thus alone,
I may sip words with thee as well as wine.
Why hast thou kept me so athirst?—Why, I
Am jealous of the flattered solitudes
In which thou walkest. [They sit at table.]

DWAINIE.

Nay, I will not tell,
Since, an I yielded, countless questions, like
In idlest worth, would waste our interview
In speculations vain.—Let this suffice:—
I stayed to talk with one whom, long ago,
I met and knew, and grew to love, forsooth,
In dreamy Wunkland.—Talked of mellow nights,
And long, long hours of golden olden times

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

When girlish happiness locked hands with me
And we went spinning round, with naked feet
In swaths of bruised roses ankle-deep ;
When laughter rang unsilenced, unrebuked,
And prayers went unremembered, oozing clean
From the drowsed memory, as from the eyes
The pure, sweet mother-face that bent above
Glimmered and wavered, blurred, bent closer still
A timeless instant, like a shadowy flame,
Then flickered tremulously o'er the brow
And went out in a kiss.

AMPHINE. [Kissing her.]

Not like to this!

O blessed lips whose kiss alone may be Sweeter than their sweet speech! Speak on, and say
Of what else talked thou and thy friend?

DWAINIE.

We talked

Of all the past, ah me! and all the friends
That now await my coming. And we talked

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Of O so many things—so many things—
That I but blend them all with dreams of when,
With thy warm hand clasped close in this of mine,
We cross the floating bridge that soon again
Will span the all-unfathomable gulfs
Of nether air betwixt this isle of strife
And my most glorious realm of changeless peace,
Where summer night reigns ever and the moon
Hangs ever ripe and lush with radiance
Above a land where roses float on wings
And fan their fragrance out so lavishly
That Heaven hath hint of it, and oft therefrom
Sends down to us across the odorous seas
Strange argosies of interchanging bud
And blossom, spice and balm.—Sweet—sweet
Beyond all art and wit of uttering.

AMPHINE.

O Empress of my listening Soul, speak on,
And tell me all of that rare land of thine!—
For even though I reigned a peerless king

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Within mine own, methinks I could fling down
My sceptre, signet, crown and royal might,
And so fare down the thornèd path of life
If at its dwindling end my feet might touch
Upon the shores of such a land as thou
Dost paint for me—thy realm! Tell on of it—
And tell me if thy sister-woman there
Is like to thee—Yet nay! for an thou didst,
These eyes would lose all speech of sight
And call not back to thine their utter love.
But tell me of thy brothers.—Are they great,
And can they grapple Æo's arguments
Beyond our skill? or wrest a purpose from
The pink side of the moon at Darsten-tide?
Or cipher out the problem of blind stars,
That ever still do safely grope their way
Among the thronging constellations?

DWAINIE.

Ay!

Ay, they have leaped all earthland barriers
In mine own isle of wisdom-working Wunks:—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

✓ 'Twas Wunkland's son that voyaged round the moon

And moored his bark within the molten bays
Of bubbling silver: And 'twas Wunkland's son
That talked with Mars—unbuckled Saturn's belt
And tightened it in squeeze of such facts
Therefrom as even he dare not disclose
In full till all his followers, as himself,
Have grown them wings, and gat them beaks and claws,

With plumage all bescienced to withstand
All tensest flames—glaze-throated, too, and lung'd
To swallow fiercest-spirited jets and cores
Of embered and unquenchable white heat:
'Twas Wunkland's son that alchemized the dews
And bred all colored grasses that he wist—
Divorced the airs and mists and caught the trick
Of azure-tinting earth as well as sky:
'Twas Wunkland's son that bent the rainbow straight

And walked it like a street, and so returned

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

To tell us it was made of hammered shine,
Inlaid with strips of selvage from the sun
And burnished with the rust of rotten stars :
'Twas Wunkland's son that comprehended first
All grosser things, and took our worlds apart
And oiled their works with theories that clicked
In glib articulation with the pulse
And palpitation of the systemed facts.—
And, circling ever round the farthest reach
Of the remotest welkin of all truths,
We stint not our investigations to
Our worlds only, but query still beyond.—
For now our goolores say, below these isles
A million million miles, are other worlds—
Not like to ours, but round, as bubbles are,
And, like them, ever reeling on through space,
And anchorless through all eternity ;—
Not like to ours, for our isles, as they note,
Are living things that fly about at night,
And soar above and cling, throughout the day,
Like bats, beneath the bent sills of the skies ;

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

And I myself have heard, at dawn of moon,
A liquid music filtered through my dreams,
As though 'twere myriads of sweet voices, pent
In some o'erhanging realm, had spilled themselves
In streams of melody that trickled through
The chinks and crannies of a crystal pave,
Until the wasted juice of harmony,
Slow-leaking o'er my senses, laved my soul
In ecstasy divine: And afferhaiks,
Who scour our coasts on missions for the King,
Declare our island's shape is like the zhibb's
When lolling in a trance upon the air
With open wings upslant and motionless.
O such a land it is—so all complete
In all wise habitants, and knowledge, lore,
Arts, sciences, perfected government
And kingly wisdom, worth and majesty—
And Art—ineffably above all else:—
The art of the Romancer,—fabulous
Beyond the miracles of strangest fact;
The art of Poesy,—the sanest soul

Is made mad with its uttering ; the art
 Of Music,—words may not e'en whimper what
 The jewel-sounds of song yield to the sense ;
 And, last,—the art of Knowing what to Know,
 And how to zoon straight to'rd like a bee,
 Draining or song or poem as it brims
 And over-runs with raciest spirit-dew.—
 And, after,—chaos all to sense like thine,
 Till there, translated, thou shalt know as I. . . .
 So furnished forth in all things lovable
 Is my Land-Wondrous—ay, and thine to be,— O Amphine, love of mine, it lacks but thy Sweet presence to make it a paradise!

[Takes up trentoraine.]

And shall I tell thee of the home that waits
 For thy glad coming, Amphine?—Listen, then!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

CHANT-RECITATIVE.

A palace veiled in a glimmering dusk ;
Warm breaths of a tropic air,
Drugged with the odorous marzhoo's musk
And the sumptuous cyncotwaire—
Where the trembling hands of the lilwing's leaves
The winds caress and fawn,
While the dreamy starlight idly weaves
Designs for the damask lawn.

Densed in the depths of a dim eclipse
Of palms, in a flowery space,
A fountain leaps from the marble lips
Of a girl, with a golden vase
Held atip on a curving wrist,
Drinking the drops that glance
Laughingly in the glittering mist
Of her crystal utterance.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Archways looped o'er blooming walks
That lead through gleaming halls;
And balconies where the word-bird talks
To the tittering waterfalls:
And casements, gauzed with the filmy sheen
Of a lace that sifts the sight
Through a ghost of bloom on the haunted screen
That drips with the dews of light.

Weird, pale shapes of sculptured stone,—
With marble nymphs agaze
Ever in fonts of amber, sown
With seeds of gold and sprays
Of emerald mosses, ever drowned,
Where glimpses of shell and gem
Peer from the depths, as round and round
The nautilus nods at them.

Faces blurred in a mazy dance,
With a music, wild and sweet,
Spinning the threads of the mad romance
That tangles the waltzers' feet;

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Twining arms, and warm, swift thrills
That pulse to the melody,
Till the soul of the dancer dips and fills
In the wells of ecstasy.

Eyes that melt in a quivering ore
Of love, and the molten kiss
Jetted forth of the hearts that pour
Their blood in the moulds of bliss.—
Till, worn to a languor slumber-deep,
The soul of the dreamer lifts
A silken sail on the gulfs of sleep,
And into the darkness drifts.

[The instrument falls from her hands—AMPHINE, in stress of passionate delight, embraces her.]

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

AMPHINE.

Thou art not all of earth, O angel one!
Nor do I far miswonder me an thou
Hast peered above the very walls of Heaven!
What hast thou seen there?—Didst on Æo bask
Thine eyes and clothe Him with new splendorings?
And strove He to fling back as bright a smile
As thine, the while He beckoned thee within?
And, tell me, didst thou meet an angel there
A-linger at the gates, nor entering
Till I, her brother, joined her?

DWAINIE.

Why, hast thou
A sister dead?—Truth, I have heard of one
Long lost to thee—not dead?

AMPHINE.

Of her I speak,—
And dead, although we know not certainly,
We moan us ever it must needs be death

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Only could hold her from us such long term
Of changeless yearning for her glad return.
She strayed away from us long, long ago.—
O and our memories!—Her wandering eyes
That seemed as though they ever looked on things
We might not see—as haply so they did,—
For she went from us, all so suddenly —
So strangely vanished, leaving never trace
Of her outgoing, that I ofttimes think
Her rapt eyes fell along some certain path
Of special glory paven for her feet,
And fashioned of Æo's supreme desire
That she might bend her steps therein and so
Reach Him again, unseen of our mere eyes.
My sweet, sweet sister!—lost to brother—sire—
And, to her heart, one dearer than all else,—
Her lover—lost indeed!

DWAINIE.

Nay, do not grieve
Thee thus, O loving heart! Thy sister yet

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

May come to thee in some glad way the Fates
Are fashioning the while thy tear-drops fall!
So calm thee, while I speak of thine own self.—
For I have listened to a whistling bird
That pipes of waiting danger. Didst thou note
No strange behavior of thy sire of late?

AMPHINE.

Ay, he is silent, and he walks as one
In some fixed melancholy, or as one Half waking.—Even his worshipped books seem now
But things on shelves.

DWAINIE.

And doth he counsel not
With thee in any wise pertaining to
His ailings, or of matters looking toward
His future purposes or his intents
Regarding thine own future fortunings

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

And his desires and interests therein?
What bearing hath be shown of late toward thee
By which thou might'st beframe some estimate
Of his mind's placid flow or turbulent?
And hath he not so spoken thee at times
Thou hast been 'wildered of his words, or grieved
Of his strange manner?

AMPHINE.

Once he stayed me on
The palace-stair and whispered, "Lo, my son,
Thy young reign draweth nigh—prepare!"—So passed
And vanished as a wraith, so wan he was!

DWAINIE.

And didst thou never reason on this thing,
Nor ask thyself what dims thy father's eye
And makes a brooding shadow of his form?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

AMPHINE.

Why, there's a household rumor that he dreams
Death fareth ever at his side, and soon
Shall signal him away.—But Jucklet saith
Crestillomeem hath said the leeches say
There is no cause for serious concern ;
And thus am I assured 'tis nothing more
Than childish fancy of mine aging sire,—
And so, as now, I laugh, full reverently,
And marvel, as I mark his shuffling gait,
And his bestrangered air and murmurous lips,
As by he glideth to and fro, ha ! ha !
Ho ! ho !—I laugh me many, many times—
Mind, thou, 'tis reverently I laugh—ha ! ha !—
And wonder, as he glideth ghostly-wise,
If ever I shall waver as I walk,
And stumble o'er my beard, and knit my brows,
And o'er the dull mosaics of the pave
Play chequers with mine eyes ! Ha ! ha !

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

DWAINIE. [Aside.]

How dare—
How dare I tell him? Yet I must—I must!

AMPHINE.

Why, art thou, too, grown childish, that thou canst
Find thee waste pleasure talking to thyself
And staring frowningly with eyes whose smiles
I need so much?

DWAINIE.

Nay, rather say, their tears,
Poor thoughtless Prince! [Aside.] (My magic even now
Forecasts his kingly sire's near happening
Of nameless hurt and ache and awful stress
Of agony supreme, when he shall stare
The stark truth in the face!).

AMPHINE.

What meanest thou?

DWAINIE.

What mean I but thy welfare? Why, I mean,
One hour ago, the Queen, thy mother—

AMPHINE.

Nay,
Say only "Queen"!

DWAINIE.

—The Queen, one hour ago—

As so I learned from source I need not say—
Sent message craving audience with the King
At noon to-night, within the Tower of Stars.—
Thou knowest, only brief space following
The time of her pent session thereset
In secret with the King alone, the Throne,
Is set, too, to convene; and that the King
Hath lent his seal unto a mandate that,
Should he withhold his presence there, the Queen
Shall be empowered to preside—to reign—
Solely endowed to work the royal will

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

In lieu of the good King. Now, therefore, I
Have been advised that she, the Queen, by craft
Connives to hold him absent purposely,
That she may claim the vacancy—for what
Covert design I know not, but I know
It augurs peril to ye both, as to
The Throne's own perpetuity. [Aside.] (Again
My magic gives me vision terrible:—
The Sorceress' legions balk mine own.—The King
Still hers, yet wavering. O save the King, Thou Æo!—Render him to us!)

AMPHINE.

I feel

Thou speakest truth: and yet how know'st thou
this?

DWAINIE.

Ask me not that; my lips are welded close.—
And, more,—since I have dared to speak, and thou
To listen,—Jucklet is accessory,
And even now is plotting for thy fall.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

But, Passion of my Soul! think not of me,—
For nothing but sheer magic may avail
To work me harm;—but look thou to thyself!
For thou art blameless cause of all the hate
That rankleth in the bosom of the Queen.
*So have thine eyes unslumbered ever, that
No step may steal behind thee—for in this
Unlooked-of way thine enemy will come:*
This much I know, but for what fell intent
Dare not surmise.—*So look thou, night and day,
That none may skulk upon thee in this wise
Of dastardly attack. [Aside.] (Ha! Sorceress!*
Thou palest, tossing wild and wantonly
The smothering golden tempest of thy hair.—
What! lying eyes! ye dare to utter tears?
Help! help! Yield us the King!)

AMPHINE.

And thou, O sweet!
How art thou guarded and what shield is thine
Of safety?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

DWAINIE.

Fear not thou for me at all.—
Possessed am I of wondrous sorcery—
The gift of Holy Magi at my birth:
Mine enemy must front me in assault
And must with mummary of speech assail,
And I will know him in first utterance—
And so may thus disarm him, though he be
A giant thrice in vasty form and force.

[Singing heard.]

But, list! what wandering minstrel cometh here
In the young night?

VOICE. [In distance—singing.]

*The drowsy eyes of the stars grow dim;
The wamboo roosts on the rainbow's rim,
And the moon is a ghost of shine:
The soothing song of the crule is done,
But the song of love is a soother one,
And the song of love is mine.*

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

*Then, wake! O wake!
For the sweet song's sake,
Nor let my heart
With the morning break!*

AMPHINE.

Some-serenader. Hist!

What meaneth he so early, and what thus
Within the palace garden-close? Quick; here!
He neareth! Soh! Let us conceal ourselves
And mark his action, wholly unobserved.

[AMPHINE and DWAINIE enter bower.]

VOICE. [Drawing nearer.]

*The mist of the morning, chill and gray,
Wraps the night in a shroud of spray;
The sun is a crimson blot:
The moon fades fast, and the stars take wing;
The comet's tail is a fleeting thing—
But the tale of love is not.*

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

*Then, wake! O wake!
For the sweet song's sake,
Nor let my heart
With the morning break!*

[Enter JUCKLET.]

JUCKLET.

Eex! what a sumptuous darkness is the Night—
How rich and deep and suave and velvety
Its lovely blackness to a soul like mine!
Ah, Night! thou densest of all mysteries—
Thou eeriest of unfathomable delights,
Whose soundless sheer inscrutability
Is fascination's own ethereal self,
Unseen, and yet embodied—palpable,—
An essence, yet a form of stableness
That stays me—weighs me, as a giant palm
Were laid on either shoulder.—Peace! I cease
Even to strive to grope one further pace,
But stand uncovered and with lifted face.

O but a glamour of inward light
 Hath smitten the eyes of my soul to-night!
 Groping here in the garden-land,
 I feel my fancy's outheld hand
 Touch the rim of a realm that seems
 Like an isle of bloom in a sea of dreams:
 I stand mazed, dazed and alone—alone!—
 My heart beats on in an undertone,
 And I lean and listen long, and long,
 And I hold my breath as I hear again
 The chords of a long-dead trentoraine
 And the wraith of an old love-song.
 Low to myself am I whispering:—
 Glad am I, and the night knows why—
 Glad am I that the dream came by
 And found me here as of old when I
 Was a ruler and a king.

DWAINIE. [To Amphine.]

What gentle little monster is this dwarf—
 Surely not Jucklet of the court?

AMPHINE. [Ironically.]

Ay, ay!

But he'll ungentle an thy woman's-heart
Yield him but space. Listen: he mouths again.

JUCKLET.

It was an age ago—an age
Turned down in life like a folded page.—
See where the volume falls apart,
And the faded bookmark—'tis my heart,—
Nor mine alone, but another knit
So cunningly in the love of it
That you must look, with a shaking head,
Nor know the quick one from the dead.
Ah! what a broad and sea-like lawn
Is the field of love they bloom upon!—
Waves of its violet-velvet grass
Billowing, with the winds that pass,
And breaking in a snow-white foam
Of lily-crests on the shores of home.

Low to myself am I whispering:—

Glad am I, and the Night knows why—

Glad am I that the dream came by

And found me here as of old when I

Was a ruler and a king.

[Abruptly breaking into impassioned vocal burst.]

SONG.

Fold me away in your arms, O Night—

Night, my Night, with your rich black hair!—

Tumble it down till my yearning sight

And my unkissed lips are hidden quite

And my heart is havened there,—

Under that mystical dark despair—

Under your rich black hair.

Oft have I looked in your eyes, O Night—

Night, my Night, with your rich black hair!—

Looked in your eyes till my face waned white

And my heart laid hold of a mad delight

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

That moaned as I held it there
Under the deeps of that dark despair—
Under your rich black hair.

Just for a kiss of your mouth, O Night—
Night, my Night, with your rich black hair!—
Lo! will I wait as a dead man might
Wait for the Judgment's dawning light,
With my lips in a frozen prayer—
Under this lovable dark despair—
Under your rich black hair.

[With swift change to mood of utter gayety.]

Ho! ho! what will my dainty mistress say
When I shall stand knee-deep in the wet grass
Beneath her lattice, and with upturned eyes
And tongue out-lolling like the clapper of
A bell, outpour her that? I wonder now
If she will not put up her finger thus,
And say, "Hist! heart of mine! the angels call

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

To thee!" Ho! ho! Or will her blushing face
Light up her dim boudoir and, from her glass,
Flare back to her a flame upsprouting from
The hot-cored socket of a soul whose light
She thought long since had guttered out?—Ho! ho!
Or, haply, will she chastely bend above—
A Parian phantomette, with head atip
And twinkling fingers dusting down the dews
That glitter on the tarapyzma-vines
That riot round her casement—gathering
Lush blooms to pelt me with while I below
All winkingly await the fragrant shower?
Ho! ho! how jolly is this thing of love!
But how much richer, rarer, jollier
Than all the loves is this rare love of mine!
Why, my sweet Princess doth not even dream
I am her lover,—for, to here confess,
I have a way of wooing all mine own,
And waste scant speech in creamy compliment
And courtesies all gaumed with winy words.—
In sooth, I do not woo at all—I win!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

How is it now the old duet doth glide
Itself full ripplingly adown the grooves
Of its quaint melody?—And whoso, by
The bye, or by the way, or for the nonce,
Or, eke ye, peradventure, ever durst
Render a duet singly but myself?

[Singing—with grotesque mimicry of two voices.]

JUCKLET'S OSTENSIBLE DUET.

How is it you woo?—and now answer me true,—
How is it you woo and you win?
Why, to answer you true,—the first thing that you do
Is to simply, my dearest—begin.

But how can I begin to woo or to win
When I don't know a Win from a Woo?
Why, cover your chin with your fan or your fin,
And I'll introduce them to you.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

But what if it drew from my parents a view

With my own in no manner akin?

No matter!—your view shall be first of the two,—

So I hasten to usher them in.

Nay, stay! Shall I grin at the Woo or the Win?

And what will he do if I do?

Why, the Woo will begin with “How pleasant it’s been!”

And the Win with “Delighted with you!”

Then supposing he grew very dear to my view—

I’m speaking, you know, of the Win?

Why, then, you should do what he wanted you to,—

And now is the time to begin.

The time to begin? O then usher him in—

Let him say what he wants me to do.

He is here.—He’s a twin of yourself,—I am

“Win,”

And you are, my darling, my “Woo”!

[Capering and courtesying to feigned audience.]

That song I call most sensible nonsense;
And if the fair and peerless Dwainie were
But here, with that sweet voice of hers, to take
The part of "Woo," I'd be the happiest "Win"
On this side of futurity! Ho! ho!

DWAINIE. [Aside to AMPHINE.]

What means he?

AMPHINE.

Why, he means that throatless head
Of his needs further chucking down betwixt
His cloven shoulders!

[Starting forward—Dwainie detaining him.]

DWAINIE.

Nay, thou shalt not stir!
See! now the monster hath discovered our Repast. Hold! Let us mark him further.

JUCKLET. [Archly eying viands.]

What!

A roasted wheffle and a toc-spiced whum,
Tricked with a larvey and a gherghgling's tail!—
And, sprit me! wine enough to swim them in!
Now I should like to put a question to
The guests; but as there are none, I direct
Mine interrogatory to the host.

[Bowing to vacancy.]

Am I behind-time?—Then I can but trust
My tardy coming may be overlooked
In my most active effort to regain
A gracious tolerance by service now:—
Directing rapt attention to the fact
That I have brought mine appetite along,
I can but feel, ho! ho! that further words
Would be a waste of speech.

[Sits at table—pours out wine, drinks and eats voraciously.]

—There was a time

When I was rather backward in my ways
 In courtly company (as though, forsooth,
 I felt not, from my very birth, the swish
 Of royal blood along my veins, though bred
 Amongst the treacled scullions and the thralls
 I shot from, like a cork, in youthful years,
 Into court-favor by my wit's sheer stress
 Of fomentation.—Pah! the stench o' toil!)
 Ay, somehow, as I think, I've all outgrown
 That coarse, nice age, wherein one makes a meal
 Of two estardles and a fork of soup.
 Hey! sanaloo! Lest my starved stomach stand
 Awe-stricken and aghast, with mouth agape
 Before the rich profusion of this feast,
 I lubricate it with a glass of merl
 And coax it on to more familiar terms
 Of fellowship with those delectables.

[Pours wine and holds up goblet with mock court-liness.]

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Mine host!—Thou of the viewless presence and Hush-haunted lip:—Thy most imperial,
Ethereal, and immaterial health!
Live till the sun dries up, and comb thy cares
With star-prongs till the comets fizzle out
And fade away and fail and are no more!

[Drains and refills goblet.]

And, if thou wilt permit me to observe,—
The gleaming shaft of spirit in this wine
Goes whistling to its mark, and full and fair
Zips to the target-centre of my soul!
Why, now am I the veriest gentleman,
That ever buttered woman with a smile,
And let her melt and run and drip and ooze
All over and around a wanton heart!
And if my mistress bent above me now,
In all my hideous deformity,
I think she would look over, as it were,
The hump upon my back, and so forget
The kinks and knuckles of my crooked legs,

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

In this enchanting smile, she needs must leap,
Love-dazzled, and fall faint and fluttering
Within these yawning, all-devouring arms
Of mine! Ho! ho! And yet Crestillomeem
Would have me blight my dainty Dwainie with
This feather from the Devil's wing!—But I Am far too full of craft to spoil the eyes
That yet shall pour their love like nectar out
Into mine own,—and I am far too deep
For royal wit to wade my purposes.

DWAINIE. [To AMPHINE.]

What can he mean?

AMPHINE. [Chafing in suppressed frenzy.]

Ha! to rush forward and
Tear out his tongue and slap it in his face!

DWAINIE. [To AMPHINE.]

Nay, nay! Hist what he saith!

JUCKLET.

How big a fool—

How all magnificent an idiot
 Would I be to blight her—(my peerless one!—
 My very soul's soul!) as Crestillomeem
 Doth instigate me to, for her hate's sake—
 And inward jealousy, as well, belike!—
 Wouldst have my Dwainie blinded to my charms—
 For charms, good sooth, were every several flaw
 Of my malformed outer-self, compared
 With that his Handsomeness the Prince Amphine
 Shalt change to at a breath of my puff'd cheek,
 E'en were it weedy-bearded at the time
 With such a stubble as a huntsman well
 Might lose his spaniel in! Ho! ho! Ho! ho!
 I fear me, O my coy Crestillomeem,
 Thine ancient coquetry doth challenge still
 Thine own vain admiration overmuch!
 I to crush her?—when thou, as certainly,
 Hast armed me to smite down the only bar

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

That lies betwixt her love and mine? Ho! ho!
Hey! but the revel I shall riot in
Above the beauteous Prince, instantuously
Made all abhorrent as a reptiled bulk!
Ho! ho! my princely wooer of the fair
Rare lady of mine own superior choice!
Pah! but my very 'maginings of him
Refinèd to that shamèd, sickening shape,
Do so beloathe me of him there be qualms
Expostulating in my forum now!
Ho! what unprincifying properties
Of medication hath her Majesty
Put in my tender charge! Ho! ho! Ho! ho!
Ah, Dwainie! sweetest sweet! what shock to thee?—

I wonder, when she sees the human toad
Squat at her feet and cock his filmy eyes
Upon her and croak love, if she will not
Call me to tweezer him with two long sticks
And toss him from her path.—O ho! Ho! ho!

Hell bend him o'er some blossom quick, that I
May have one brother in the flesh!

[Nods drowsily.]

DWAINIE. [To AMPHINE.]

Ha! See!

He groweth drunken.—Soh! Bide yet a spell
And I will vex him with my sorcery:
Then shall we hence,—for lo, the node when all
Our subtlest arts and strategies must needs
Be quickened into acts and swift results.
Now bide thou here, and in mute silence mark
The righteous penalty that hath accrued
Upon that dwarfèd monster.

[She stands, still in concealment from the dwarf, her tense gaze fixed upon him as though in mute and painful act of incantation.—JUCKLET affected drowsily—yawns and mumbles incoherently—stretches, and gradually sinks at full length on the sward.—DWAINIE moves forward—AMPHINE, following, is about to set foot contemptuously on sleeper's breast, but is caught and held away by DWAINIE, who imperiously waves him back, and still, in pantomime, commanding, bids him turn and hide his face—AMPHINE obeying as though unable to do otherwise. DWAINIE then unbinds her hair, and throwing it all forward covering her face and bending till it trails the ground, she lifts to the knee her dress, and so walks backward in a circle round the sleeping JUCKLET, crooning to herself an incoherent song. Then pausing, letting fall her gown, and rising to full stature, waves her hands above the sleeper's face, and runs to AMPHINE, who turns about and gazes on her with new wonderment.]

DWAINIE. [To AMPHINE.]

Now shalt thou
Look on such scaith as thou hast never dreamed.

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

[As she speaks, half averting her face as with melancholy apprehension, chorus of lugubrious voices heard chanting discordantly.]

VOICES.

When the fat moon smiles,
And the comets kiss,
And the elves of Spirkland flit,
The Whanghoo twunkers
A tune like this,
And the Nightmares champ the bit.

[As chorus dies away, a comet, freighted with weird shapes, dips from the night and trails near JUCKLET's sleeping figure, while, with attendant goblin-forms, two Nightmares, CREECH and GRITCHFANG, alight. — The comet hisses, switches its tail and disappears, while the two goblins hover buzzingly over JUCKLET, who starts wide-eyed and

stares fixedly at them, with horribly contorted features.]

CREECH. [To GRITCHFANG.]

Buzz!

Buzz!

Buzz!

Buzz!

Flutter your wings like your grandmother does!
Tuck in your chin and wheel over and whir-r-r
Like a dickerbug fast in the web of the wuhrr!
Reel out your tongue, and untangle your toes
And rattle your claws o'er the bridge of his nose;
Tickle his ears with your feathers and fuzz,
And keep up a hum like your grandmother does!

[JUCKLET moans and clutches at air convulsively.]

AMPHINE. [Shuddering.]

Most grewsome sight! See how the poor worm writhes!

How must he suffer!

DWAINIE.

Ay, but good is meant—

A far voice sings it so.

GRITCHFANG. [To CREECH.]

Let me dive deep in his nostriline caves,
And keep an eye out as to how he behaves:
Fasten him down while I put him to rack—
And don't let him flop from the flat of his back!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Ho! I have bored through the floor of his brains,
And set them all writhing with torturous pains;
And I shriek out the prayer, as I whistle and whiz,
I may be the nightmare that my grandmother is!

*[Reappears, through reversal of flower-method, assuming former shape, crosses to CREECH,
and, joining, the twain dance on sleeper's stomach in broken time to duo.]*

Duo.

Whing!

Whang!

So our ancestors sang!

And they guzzled hot blood and blew up with a bang!—

But they ever tenaciously clung to the rule
To only blow up in the hull of a fool—
To fizz and explode like a cast-iron toad
In the cavernous depths where his victuals were stowed—

When chances were ripest and thickest and best
To burst every button-hole out of his vest!

[They pause, float high above, and fusing together into a great square iron weight, drop heavily on chest of sleeper, who moans piteously.]

AMPHINE. [Hiding his face.]

Ah! take me hence!

[DWAINIE leads him off, looking backward as she goes and waving her hands imploringly to CREECH and GRITCHFANG, reassuming former shapes, in ecstasies of insane delight.]

CREECH. [To GRITCHFANG.]

Zipp!

Zipp!

Zipp!

Zipp!

Sting his tongue raw and unravel his lip!

Grope, on the right, down his windpipe, and squeeze

His liver as dry as a petrified wheeze!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

[GRITCHFANG—as before—shrinks and disappears at sleeper's mouth.]

Throttle his heart till he's black in the face,
And bury it down in some desolate place
Where only remorse in pent agony lives
To dread the advice that your grandmother gives!

[The sleeper struggles contortedly, while voice of GRITCHFANG calls from within.]

GRITCHFANG.

Ho-ho! I have clambered the rungs of his ribs
And beriddled his lungs into tatters and dribs;
And I turn up the tube of his heart like a hose
And squirt all the blood to the end of his nose!
I stamp on his stomach and caper and prance,
With my tail tossing round like a boomerang-lance!

And thus may success ever crown my intent
To wander the ways that my grandmother went!

[Reappears, falls hysterically in CREECH'S out-stretched arms.—Then dance and duo:]

Duo.

Whing!

Whung!

So our ancestors sung!

And they snorted and pawed, and they hissed and they stung,—

Taking special terrific delight in their work
On the fools that they found in the lands of the Spirk.—

And each little grain of their powders of pain
They scraped up and pestled again and again—
Mixed in quadruple doses for gluttons and sots,
Till they strangled their dreams with gung-jibbrious knots!

[The comet again trails past, upon which the Nightmares leap and disappear. JUCKLET staggers to his feet and glares frenziedly

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

*around—then starts for opposite exit of comet—
—is there suddenly confronted with fiend-faces in the air, bewhiskered with ragged purplish flames that flare audibly and huskily in abrupt alternating chill gasps and hot welterings of wind. He starts back from them, reels and falls prostrate, grovelling terrifiedly in the dust, and chattering, with eerie music accompanying his broken utterance.]*

JUCKLET.

Æo! Æo! Æo!

Thou that dost all things know—

Waiving all claims of mine to dare to pray,
Save that I needs must:—Lo,

What may I pray for? Yea,

I have not any way,

An Thou gainsayest me a tolerance so.—

I dare not pray

Forgiveness—too great

My vast o’ertoppling weight

Of sinning; nor can I
Pray my Poor soul uncourged to go.—
Frame Thou my prayer, Æo!
What may I pray for? Dare
I shape a prayer,
 In sooth,
For any cancelled joy
 Of my mad youth,
Or any bliss my sin's stress did destroy?
What may I pray for—What!—
That the wild clusters of forget-me-not
 And mignonette
 And violet
Be out of childhood brought,
 And in mine hard heart set
A-blooming now as then?—
 With all their petals yet
Bediamonded with dew—
Their sweet, sweet scent let loose
Full sumptuously again!

What may I pray, Æo!

For the poor hutchèd cot

Where death sate squat

Midst my first memories?—Lo!

My mother's face—(they, whispering, told me so)—

That face!—so pinchedly

It blanched up, as they lifted me—

Its frozen eyelids would

Not part, nor could

Be ever wetted open with warm tears.

. . . Who hears

The prayers for all dead-mother-sakes, Æo!

Leastwise one mercy:—May

I not have leave to pray

All self to pass away—

Forgetful of all needs mine own—

Neglectful of all creeds;—alone,

Stand fronting Thy high throne and say:

To Thee,

O Infinite, I pray

Shield Thou mine enemy!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

[Music throughout supplication gradually softens and sweetens into utter gentleness, with scene slow-fading into densest night.]

END ACT II.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Court of KRUNG—Royal Ministers, Counsellors, etc., in session. CRESTILLO-MEEM, in full blazonry of regal attire, presiding. She signals a Herald at her left, who steps forward.—Blare of trumpets, greeted with ominous murmurings within, blent with tumult from without.

HERALD.

Hist, ho! Ay, ay! Ay, ay!—Her Majesty,
The All-Glorious and Ever-Gracious Queen,
Crestillomeem, to her most loyal, leal
And right devoted subjects, greeting sends—
Proclaiming, in the absence of the King,
Her royal presence—

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

[Voice of Herald fails abruptly—utterly.—A breathless hush falls sudden on the court.—A sense oppressive—ominous—affects the throng. Weird music heard of unseen instruments.]

HERALD. [Huskily striving to be heard.]

Hist, ho! Ay, ay! Ay, ay!—Her majesty,
The All-Glorious and Ever-Gracious Queen,
Crestillomeem—

[The Queen gasps, and clutches at Herald, mutely signing him to silence, her staring eyes fixed on a shadowy figure, mistily developing before her into wraith-like form and likeness of the Tunc-Fool, SPRAIVOLL. The shape—evidently invisible and voiceless to all senses but the Queen's—wavers vaporishly to and fro before her, moaning and crooning in infinitely sweet-sad minor cadences a mystic song.]

WRAITH-SONG OF SPRAIVOLL.

*I will not hear the dying word
Of any friend, nor stroke the wing
Of any little wounded bird.
. . . Love is the dearest thing!*

*I wist not if I see the smile
Of prince or wight, in court or lane.—
I only know that afterwhile
He will not smile again.*

*The summer blossom, at my feet,
Swims backward, drowning in the grass.—
I will not stay to name it sweet—
Sink out! and let me pass!*

*I have no mind to feel the touch
Of gentle hands on brow and hair.—
The lack of this once pained me much,
And so I have a care.*

*Dead weeds, and husky-rustling leaves
That beat the dead boughs where ye cling,
And old dead nests beneath the eaves—
Love is the deadest thing!*

*Ah! once I fared not all alone;
And once—no matter, rain or snow!—
The stars of summer ever shone—
Because I loved him so!*

*With always tremblings in his hands,
And always blushes unaware,
And always ripples down the strands
Of his long yellow hair.*

*I needs must weep a little space,
Remembering his laughing eyes
And curving lip, and lifted face
Of rapture and surprise.*

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

*O joy is dead in every part,
And life and hope; and so I sing:
In all the graveyard of my heart
Love is the deadest thing!*

[With dying away of song, apparition of SPRAIVOLL slowly vanishes. CRESTILLOMEEM turns dazedly to throng, and with labored effort strives to reassume imperious mien.—Signs for merl and tremulously drains goblet—sinks back in throne with feigned complacency, mutely waving Herald to proceed.]

HERALD. [Mechanically.]

Hist, ho! Ay, ay! Ay, ay!—Her Majesty,
The All-Glorious and Ever-Gracious Queen,
Crestillomeem, to her most loyal, leal
And right devoted subjects, greeting sends—
Proclaiming, in the absence of the King,
Her royal presence, as by him empowered

To sit and occupy, maintain and hold,
And therefrom rule the Throne, in sovereign state,
And work the royal will—[Confusion.] Hist, ho! Ay, ay!
Ay, ay!—And be it known, the King, in view
Of his approaching dissolution—

[Sensation among Counsellors, etc., within, and wild tumult without and cries “Long live the King!” and “Treason!” “Intrigue!” “Sorcery!” CRESTILLOMEEM, in supressed ire, waving silence, and Herald striving to be heard.]

HERALD.

Hist, ho! Ay, ay! Ay, ay!—The King, in view
Of his approaching dissolution, hath Decreed this instrument—this royal scroll
[Unrolling and displaying scroll.]
With royal seal thereunto set by Krung’s
Most sacred act and sign—

[General sensation within, and growing tumult without, with wrangling cries of "Plot!" "Treason!" "Conspiracy!" and "Down with the Queen!" "Down with the usurper!" "Down with the Sorceress!"]

CRESTILLOMEEM. [Wildly.]

Who dares to cry
"Conspiracy!" Bring me the traitor-knave!

[Growing confusion without—sound of rioting.—Voice, "Let me be taken! Let me be taken!" Enter Guards, dragging JUCKLET forward, wild-eyed and hysterical—the Queen's gaze fastened on him wonderingly.]

CRESTILLOMEEM. [To Guards.]

Why bring ye Jucklet hither in this wise?

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

GUARD.

O Queen, 'tis he who cries "Conspiracy!"—
And who incites the mob without with cries
Of "Plot!" and "Treason!"

CRESTILLOMEEM. [Starting.]

Ha! Can this be true?

I'll not believe it!—Jucklet is my fool,
But not so vast a fool that he would tempt
His gracious Sovereign's ire. [To Guards.] Let him be freed!

[Then to JUCKLET, with mock service.]

Stand hither, O my Fool!

JUCKLET. [To Queen.]

What! I, thy fool?

Ho! ho! Thy fool?—ho! ho!—Why, thou art
mine!

[Confusion—cries of "Strike down the traitor!"

JUCKLET wrenching himself from grasp of officers.]

Back, all of ye! I have not waded hell
That I should fear your puny enmity!
Here will I give ye proof of all I say!

[Presses toward throne, wedging his opposers left and right—CRESTILLOMEEM sits as though stricken speechless—pallid, waving him back —JUCKLET, fairly fronting her, with folded arms—then to throng continues.]

Lo! do I here defy her to lift up
Her voice and say that Jucklet speaks a lie.

*[At sign of Queen, officers, unperceived by JUCK-
LET, close warily behind him.]*

And, further—I pronounce the document
That craven Herald there holds in his hand
A forgery—a trick—and dare the Queen,
Here in my listening presence, to command
Its further utterance!

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

CRESTILLOMEEM. [Wildly rising.]

Hold, hireling!—Fool!—

The Queen thou dost in thy mad boasts insult
Shall utter first thy doom!

[JUCKLET, seized from behind by Guards, is hurled face upward on the dais at her feet, while a minion, with drawn sword pressed close against his breast, stands over him.]

—Ere we proceed

With graver matters, let this demon-knave
Be sent back home to hell.

[With awful stress of ire, form quivering, eyes glittering and features twitched and ashen.]

Give me the sword,—

The insult hath been mine—so even shall
The vengeance be!

[As CRESTILLOMEEM seizes sword and bends forward to strike, JUCKLET, with superhuman effort, frees his hand, and, with a sudden motion and an incoherent muttering, flings object in his assailant's face,—CRESTILLOMEEM staggers backward, dropping sword, and, with arms tossed aloft, shrieks, totters and falls prone upon the pave. In confusion following JUCKLET mysteriously vanishes; and as the bewildered Courtiers lift the fallen Queen, a clear, piercing voice of thrilling sweetness is heard singing.]

VOICE.

The pride of noon must wither soon—
 The dusk of death must fall;
 Yet out of darkest night the moon
 Shall blossom over all!

[*For an instant a dense cloud envelops empty throne
—then gradually lifts, discovering therein
KRUNG seated, in royal panoply and state, with JUCKLET in act of presenting sceptre to him.—Blare of trumpets, and chorus of Courtiers, Ministers, Heralds, etc.*]

CHORUS.

All hail! Long live the King!

KRUNG. [To throng, with grave salutation.]

Through Æo's own great providence, and through
The intervention of an angel whom
I long had deemed forever lost to me,
Once more your favored Sovereign, do I greet
And tender ye my blessing, O most good
And faith-abiding subjects of my realm!
In common, too, with your long-suffering King,
Have ye long suffered, blamelessly as he:
Now, therefore, know ye all what, until late,

He knew not of himself, and with him share
The rapturous assurance that is his,—
That, for all time to come, are we restored
To the old glory and most regal pride
And opulence and splendor of our realm.

[Turning with pained features to the strangely stricken Queen.]

There have been, as ye needs must know, strange spells

And wicked sorceries at work within

The very dais-boundaries of the Throne.

Lo! then, behold your harrier and mine,

And with me grieve for the self-ruined Queen

Who grovels at my feet, blind, speechless, and

So stricken with a curse herself designed

Should light upon Hope's fairest minister.

[*Motions attendants, who lead away CRESTILLO-
MEEM—the King gazing after her, overmas-tered with stress of his emotions.—He leans heavily on throne, as though oblivious to all* surroundings, and, shaping into speech his varying thought, as in a trance, speaks as though witless of both utterance and auditor.]

I loved her.—Why? I never knew.—Perhaps Because her face was fair; perhaps because
 Her eyes were blue and wore a weary air;—
 Perhaps . . . perhaps because her limpid face
 Was eddied with a restless tide, wherein
 The dimples found no place to anchor and Abide: perhaps because her tresses beat
 A froth of gold about her throat, and poured
 In splendor to the feet that ever seemed Afloat. Perhaps because of that wild way
 Her sudden laughter overleapt propriety;
 Or—who will say?—perhaps the way she wept.
 Ho! have ye seen the swollen heart of summer
 Tempest, o'er the plain, with throbs of thunder Burst apart and drench the earth with rain? She Wept like that.—And to recall, with one wild glance

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

Of memory, our last love-parting—tears
And all. . . . It thrills and maddens me! And yet
My dreams will hold her, flushed from lifted brow
To finger-tips, with passion's ripest kisses
Crushed and mangled on her lips. . . . O woman!

while

Your face was fair, and heart was pure, and lips
Were true, and hope as golden as your hair,
I should have strangled you!

[As KRUNG, ceasing to speak, piteously lifts his face, SPRAIVOLL all suddenly appears, in space left vacant by the Queen, and, kneeling, kisses the King's hand.—He bends in tenderness, kissing her brow—then lifts and seats her at his side. Speaks then to throng.]

Good Subjects—Lords:

Behold in this sweet woman here my child
Whom, years ago, the cold, despicable
Crestillomeem—by baleful, wicked arts
And grewsome spells and fearsome witcheries—

Did spirit off to some strange otherland,
 Where, happily, a Wunkland Princess found
 Her, and undid the spell by sorcery
 More potent—ay, Divine, since it works naught
 But good—the gift of Æo, to right wrong.
 This magic dower the Wunkland Princess hath
 Enlisted in our restoration here,
 In secret service, till this joyful hour
 Of our complete deliverance. Even thus.—
 Lo, let the peerless Princess now appear!

[He lifts sceptre, and a gust of melody, divinely beautiful, sweeps through the court.—The star above the throne loosens and drops slowly downward, bursting like a bubble on the sceptre-tip, and, issuing therefrom, AMPHINE and DWAINIE, hand in hand, kneel at the feet of KRUNG, who bends above them with his blessing, while JUCKLET capers wildly round the group.]

THE FLYING ISLANDS OF THE NIGHT

JUCKLET.

Ho! ho! but I could shriek for very joy!
And though my recent rival, fair Amphine,
Doth even now bend o'er a blossom, I,
Besprit me! have no lingering desire
To meddle with it, though with but one eye
I slept the while she backward walked around
Me in the garden.

[AMPHINE dubiously smiles—JUCKLET blinks and leers—and DWAINIE bites her finger.]

KRUNG.

Peace! good Jucklet! Peace!
For this is not a time for any jest.—
Though the old order of our realm hath been Restored, and though restored my very life—
Though I have found a daughter,—I have lost
A son—for Dwainie, with her sorcery,
Will, on the morrow, carry him away.
'Tis Æo's largess, as our love is His,
And our abiding trust and gratefulness.

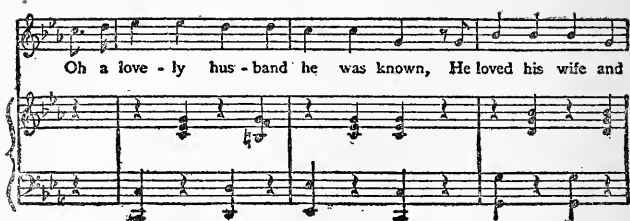

CURTAIN.

SPIRK AND WUNK RHYMES
ROUNDS AND CATCHES

*TO loll back, in a misty hammock, swung
From tip to tip of a slim crescent moon
That gems some royal-purple night of June—
To dream of songs that never have been sung
Since the first stars were stilled and God was young
And heaven as lonesome as a lonesome tune:
To lie thus, lost to earth, with lids aswoon;
By curious, cool winds back and forward flung,
With fluttering hair, blurred eyes, and utter ease
Adrift like lazy blood through every vein;
And then,—the pulse of unvoiced melodies
Timing the raptured sense to some refrain
That knows nor words, nor rhymes, nor euphonies,
Save Fancy's hinted chime of unknown seas.*

[NOTE.—Only the musical reader who has tried to whistle the elusive airs of an exquisite music-box can rightly appreciate how futile were a general attempt here accurately to reproduce the music of the Spirks and Wunks: So, but one simplest, all imperfect illustration of it is ventured.—Indeed, the imagination may be better looked to for the just translations of the curious airs of such songs as from time to time follow. So, too, in numberless other respects, must the reader's fancy freely play—even as the writer frankly confesses his own has done,—in such particulars, for instance, as fancying the “ont-l-dawn-bird” of the Flying Islanders is our nightingale; their “trance-bird” our humming-bird; their “echo-bird” our mocking-bird, etc., etc., ad infinitum.]

He fanned her, if she would be fanned;
He vanished when she willed it.—And

THE LIGHT OF LOVE

Song

THE clouds have deepened o'er the night
Till, through the dark profound,
The moon is but a stain of light,
And all the stars are drowned;
And all the stars are drowned, my love,
And all the skies are drear;
But what care we for light above,
If light of love is here?

The wind is like a wounded thing
That beats about the gloom
With baffled breast and drooping wing,
And wail of deepest doom;
And wail of deepest doom, my love;
But what have we to fear
From night, or rain, or winds above,
With love and laughter here?

SONGS TUNELESS

I

HE kisses me! Ah, now, at last,
He says good-night as it should be,
His great warm eyes bent yearningly
Above my face—his arms locked fast
About me, and mine own eyes dim
With happy tears for love of him.

He kisses me! Last night, beneath
A swarm of stars, he said I stood
His one fair form of womanhood,
And springing, shut me in the sheath
Of a caress that almost hid
Me from the good his kisses did.

SONGS TUNELESS

He kisses me! He kisses me!
This is the sweetest song I know,
And so I sing it very low
And faint, and O so tenderly
That, though you listen, none but he May hear it as he kisses me.

II

“How can I make you love me more?”—
A thousand times she asks me this,
Her lips uplifted with the kiss
That I have tasted o’er and o’er.
Till now I drain it with no sense
Other than utter indolence.

“How can I make you love me more?”
A thousand times her questioning face
Has nestled in its resting-place
Unanswered, till, though I adore
This thing of being loved, I doubt
Not I could get along without.

“How can she make me love her more?”—

Ah! little woman, if, indeed,
I might be frank as is the need
Of frankness, I would fall before
Her very feet, and there confess
My love were more if hers were less.

III

Since I am old I have no care
To babble silly tales of when
I loved, and lied, as other men
Have done, who boasted here and there,
They would have died for the fair thing
They after murdered, marrying.

Since I am old I reason thus—
No thing survives, of all the past,
But just regret enough to last
Us till the clods have smothered us;—
Then, with our dead loves, side by side,
We may, perhaps, be satisfied.

SONGS TUNELESS

Since I am old, and strive to blow
 Alive the embers of my youth
 And early loves, I find, in sooth,
An old man's heart may burn so low,
 'Tis better just to calmly sit
 And rake the ashes over it.

OUT OF THE DARK AND THE DEARTH

Ho! but the darkness was densely black!

And young feet faltered and groped their way,
With never the gleam of a star, alack!

Nor a moonbeam's lamest ray!—

Blind of light as the blind of sight.—

And that was the night—the night!

And out of the blackness, vague and vast,

And out of the dark and the dearth, behold!—

A great ripe radiance grew at last

And burst like a bubble of gold,

Gilding the way that the feet danced on.—

And that was the dawn—The Dawn!

SPIRK TROLL-DERISIVE

I

THE Crankadox leaned o'er the edge of the moon
And wistfully gazed on the sea—

The sea,—

Where the Cryxabodill madly whistled a tune
To the air of "Ti-fol-de-ding-dee"—

Ding-dee—

To the air of "Ti-fol-de-ding-dee."

The quavering shriek
Of the Fly-up-the-creek
Was fitfully wafted afar—

Afar—

To the Queen of the Wunks as she powdered her cheek

With the pulverized rays of a star—

Ar-rar—

The pulverized rays of a star.

II

The Ghost of the Zhack flitted by in a trance,
And the Squidjum hid under a tub—

A tub—

As he heard the loud hooves of the Hooken advance

With a rub-a-dub—dub-a-dub—dub!

Dub-dub!

With a rub-a-dub—dub-a-dub—dub!

And the Crankadox cried,

As he lay down and died,

“My fate there is none to bewail—

Bewail!”

While the Queen of the Wunks drifted over the tide

With a long piece of crape to her tail

So pale—

A long piece of crape to her tail!

THE ROMAUNT OF KING MORDAMEER

Ho! did ye hear of Mordameer,
The King of Slumberland!
A lotus-crown upon his brow—
A poppy in his hand,
And all the elves that people dreams
To bow at his command.

His throne is wrought of blackest night,
Enriched with rare designs
Wherein the blazing comet runs
And writhes and wreaths and twines
About a crescent angel-face
That ever smiling shines.

THE ROMAUNT OF KING MORDAMEER

The dais is of woven rays
Of starlight fringed with shade,
And jewelled o'er with gems of dew,
And dyed and interlaid
With every gleaming tint and hue
Of which the flowers are made.

And when the day has died away
In darkness o'er the land,
The King bends down his dusky face
And takes the sleeper's hand,
And lightly o'er his folded eyes
He waves his magic wand.

And lo! within his princely home,
Upon his downy bed,
With soft and silken coverlets
And curtains round him spread,
The rich man rolls in troubled sleep,
And moans in restless dread:

THE ROMAUNT OF KING MORDAMEER

His eyes are closed, yet Mordameer
May see their stony stare
As plainly fixed in agony
As though the orbs were bare
And glaring at the wizard throng
That fills the empty air:—

A thousand shapes, with phantom japes,
Dance o'er the sleeper's sight,—
With fingers bony-like and lean,
And faces pinched and white,
And withered cheeks, and sunken eyes
With ever-ravening sight.

And such the dreams that Mordameer
Brings to the child of Pride,—
The worn and wasted forms that he Hath stinted and denied—
Of those who filled his coffers up
And empty-handed died.

And then again he waves his wand :

And from his lair of straw

The felon, with his fettered limbs,

Starts up with fear and awe,

And stares with starting eyes upon

A vision of the law :

A grim procession passes by,

The while he glares in fear—

With faces, from a wanton's smile

Down to a demon's leer,—

The woman marching at the front,

The hangman at the rear.

All ways are clear to Mordameer :

The ocean knows his tread ;

His feet are free on land or sea :—

Above the sailor's head

He hangs a dream of home, and bends

Above his cottage-bed :

And, nestled in the mother's arms,
A child surpassing fair,
In slumber lies, its tiny hands
Entangled in her hair,
And round its face a smile that moves
Its lips as though in prayer.

And lo! the good king feasts its eyes
With fruits from foreign shores,
And pink-lipped shells that ever mock
The ocean as it roars;
And in the mother's arms he folds
The form that she adores.

Through all the hovels of the poor
He steals with noiseless tread,
And presses kisses o'er and o'er
Where sorrow's tears are shed,
Till old caresses live once more
That are forever dead.

Above the soldier in his tent
Are glorious battles fought;
And o'er the prince's velvet couch,
And o'er the peasant's cot,
And o'er the pallet of disease
His wondrous spells are wrought.

He bends him o'er the artist's cot,
And fills his dazzled mind
With airy forms that float about
Like clouds in summer wind,
O'er landscapes that the angels wrought
And God Himself designed.

And drifting through the poet's dreams
The seraph trails her wings,
And fills the chancels of his soul
With heavenly whisperings;
Till, swooning with delight, he hears
The song he never sings.

He walks the wide world's every way,
This monarch grand and grim ;
All paths that reach the human heart,
However faint and dim,
He journeys, for the darkest night
Is light as day to him.

And thus the lordly Mordameer
Rules o'er his mystic realm,
With gems from out the star's red core
To light his diadem,
And kings and emperors to kneel
And kiss his garment's hem.

For once, upon a night of dreams,
Adown the aisles of space
I strayed so far that I forgot
Mine own abiding-place,
And wandered into Slumberland,
And met him face to face.

DEATH

Lo, I am dying! And to feel the King
Of Terrors fasten on me, steep's all sense
Of life, and love, and loss, and everything,
In such deep calms of restful indolence,
His keenest fangs of pain are sweet to me
As fusèd kisses of mad lovers' lips
When, flung shut-eyed in spasmed ecstasy,
They feel the world spin past them in eclipse,
And so thank God with ever-tightening lids!
But what I see, the soul of me forbids
All utterance of; and what I hear and feel,
The rattle in my throat could ill reveal
Though it were music to your ears as to Mine own.—Press closer—closer—I have grown
So great, your puny arms about me thrown
Seem powerless to hold me here with you ;—

DEATH

I slip away—I waver—and—I fall—
Christ! What a plunge! Where am I dropping?
All
My breath bursts into dust—I cannot cry—
I whirl—I reel and veer up overhead,
And drop flat-faced against—against—the sky—
Soh, bless me! I am dead!

WE ARE NOT ALWAYS GLAD WHEN WE SMILE

WE are not always glad when we smile:
Though we wear a fair face and are gay,
And the world we deceive
May not ever believe
We could laugh in a happier way.—
Yet, down in the deeps of the soul,
Ofttimes, with our faces aglow,
There's an ache and a moan
That we know of alone,
And as only the hopeless may know.

We are not always glad when we smile,—
For the heart, in a tempest of pain,
May live in the guise
Of a smile in the eyes
As a rainbow may live in the rain;

And the stormiest night of our woe
May hang out, a radiant star
Whose light in the sky
Of despair is a lie
As black as the thunder-clouds are.

We are not always glad when we smile!—
But the conscience is quick to record,
All the sorrow and sin
We are hiding within
Is plain in the sight of the Lord:
And ever, O ever, till pride
And evasion shall cease to defile
The sacred recess
Of the soul, we confess
We are not always glad when we smile.

THE WEREWIFE

SHE came to me in a dazzling guise
Of gleaming tresses and glimmering eyes,
With long, limp lashes that drooped and made
For their baleful glances bowers of shade ;
And a face so white—so white and sleek
That the roses blooming in either cheek
Flamed and burned with a crimson glow
Redder than ruddiest roses blow—
Redder than blood of the roses know
That Autumn spills in the drifted snow.
And what could my fluttering, moth-winged soul
Do but hover in her control?—
With its little, bewildered bead-eyes fixed
Where the gold and the white and the crimson mixed?

And when the tune of her low laugh went
Up from that ivory instrument
That you would have called her throat, I swear
The notes built nests in her gilded hair,
And nestled and whistled and twittered there,
And wooed me and won me to my despair.
And thus it was that she lured me on,
Till the latest gasp of my love was gone,
And my soul lay dead, with a loathing face
Turned in vain from her dread embrace,—
For even its poor dead eyes could see
Her sharp teeth sheathed in the flesh of me,
And her dripping lips, as she turned to shake
The red froth off that her greed did make,
As my heart gripped hold of a deathless ache,
And the kiss of her stung like the fang of a snake.

THE RAIN

*The rain sounds like a laugh to me—
A low laugh poured out limpedly.*

My very soul smiles as I listen to

The low, mysterious laughter of the rain,

Poured musically over heart and brain

Till sodden care, soaked with it through and through,

Sinks; and, with wings wet with it as with dew,

My spirit flutters up, with every stain

Rinsed from its plumage, and as white again

As when the old laugh of the rain was new.

Then laugh on, happy Rain! laugh louder yet!—

Laugh out in torrent-bursts of watery mirth;

Unlock thy lips of purple cloud, and let

Thy liquid merriment baptize the earth,

And wash the sad face of the world, and set

The universe to music dripping-wet!

FOR YOU

For you, I could forget the gay
Delirium of merriment,
And let my laughter die away
In endless silence of content.

I could forget, for your dear sake,
The utter emptiness and ache
Of every loss I ever knew.—
What could I not forget for you?

I could forget the just deserts
Of mine own sins, and so erase
The tear that burns, the smile that hurts,
And all that mars and masks my face.
For your fair sake I could forget
The bonds of life that chafe and fret,
Nor care if death were false or true.—
What could I not forget for you?

FOR YOU

What could I not forget? Ah me!

One thing I know would still abide Forever in my memory,

Though all of love were lost beside—

I yet would feel how first the wine

Of your sweet lips made fools of mine

Until they sung, all drunken through—

“What could I not forget for you?”

THE STRANGE YOUNG MAN

'Twas a strange young man of the dreamy times
When bards made money, and bankers rhymes ;
And drones made honey—and bees made naught ;
And the bad sung hymns, and the good-folk fought ;
And the merchants lurked in the shade all day
And pitched horsehoes in a listless way !
When the ticket-man at the station knew
If your trunk would go if you checked it through,
And if 2:30 meant half-past two,
And what in-the-name-of-the-land to do
If a man got left when he oughtn't to :
When the cabman wept as he took your fare,
And the street-car driver led in prayer—
And the kuss with the dyed mustache was there
That rode in town on a “jumper”-sled,
And got whipped twice for the things he said
To fellows that told him his hair was red.

THE STRANGE YOUNG MAN

And the strange young man (of which and whom
Our pencil offers to deign presume
To treat of now, in the days like these
When young men dress as they please to please)
Went round in a coat of pale pink-blue,
And a snow-white vest of a crimson hue,
And trousers purple, and gaiters gray—
All cut, as the French or the Dutch would say,—
La—macht nichts aus, oder—décolleté,—
Strange not only in dress, but in
The dimples he wore in cheek and chin—
All nailed over with scraps of tin,
Where he hadn't been shaved as he'd ought o'
been;—

And his crape cravat, and the shape of that,
And the ear-tab over his diamond-pin.
And his friends all wondered, and used to say,—
“What a strange young man! Ah me! Hooray!
How sad he seems in his wild delight!
And how tickled indeed when he weeps outright!

THE STRANGE YOUNG MAN

What a comical man when he writhes in pain;
And how grieved he grows when he's glad again!"
And marvelling still to remark new facts,
They said, "How slender and slim he acts!
And isn't it odd for a man to wear
A thumb-stall over his nose, and pare
His finger-nails with a carving-knife,
And talk of prunes to the landlord's wife?
It is patent to us—and, indeed, no doubt,
 Though as safely sealed as an oyster-can,—
Our interest in him must needs leak out,— Namely, that he is a strange young man!"

“DREAM”

BECAUSE her eyes were far too deep
And holy for a laugh to leap
Across the brink where sorrow tried
To drown within the amber tide ;
Because the looks, whose ripples kissed
The trembling lids through tender mist,
Were dazzled with a radiant gleam—
Because of this I called her “Dream.”

Because the roses growing wild
About her features when she smiled
Were ever dewed with tears that fell
With tenderness ineffable ;
Because her lips might spill a kiss
That, dripping in a world like this,
Would tincture death’s myrrh-bitter stream
To sweetness—so I called her “Dream.”

“ DREAM ’ ’

Because I could not understand
The magic touches of a hand
That seemed, beneath her strange control,
To smooth the plumage of the soul
And calm it, till, with folded wings,
It half forgot its flutterings,
And, nestled in her palm, did séem
To trill a song that called her “ Dream.”

Because I saw her, in a sleep
As dark and desolate and deep
And fleeting as the taunting night
That flings a vision of delight
To some lorn martyr as he lies
In slumber ere the day he dies—
Because she vanished like a gleam
Of glory, do I call her “ Dream.”

A WRANGDILLION

I

DEXERY-TETHERY! down in the dike,
Under the—Under the ooze and the slime,
Nestles the wraith of a reticent Gryke,
Blubbering bubbles of rhyme:
Though the reeds touch him and tickle his teeth—
Though the Grai—Though the Graigroll and the Cheest
Pluck at the leaves of his laureate-wreath,
Nothing affects him the least.

CHORUS.

*Nay, nothing—Nay, nothing affects him the least!
They may say he sings less like a bird than a beast—*

A WRANGDILLION

*They may say that his song is both patchy and pieced—
That its worst may be his, but the best he has fleeced
From old dinky masters not only deceased
But damn'd ere their dying,—Yet nothing the least—
Nothing affects him the least!*

II

He sinks to the dregs in the dead o' the night,
And he shuf—And he shuffles the shadows about
As he gathers the stars in a nest of delight
And sets there and hatches them out:
The Zhederrill peers from his watery mine
In scorn with—In scorn with the Will-o'-the-wisp,
As he twinkles his eyes in a whisper of shine
That ends in a luminous lisp.

A WRANGDILLION

CHORUS

*Nay, nothing—Nay, nothing affects him the least!
They may say he sings less like a bird than a beast—*

They may say that his song is both patchy and pieced—

That its worst may be his, but the best he has fleeced

*From old dinky masters not only deceased
But damn'd ere their dying,—Yet nothing the

Nothing affects him the least!

THE WITCH OF ERKMURDEN

I

WHO cantereth forth in the night so late—
So late in the night, and so nigh the dawn?
'Tis The Witch of Erkmurden who leapeth the gate
Of the old churchyard where the three Sprites wait
Till the whirl of her broom is gone.

And who peereth down from the belfry tall,
With the ghost-white face and the ghastly stare,
With lean hands clinched in the grated wall
Where the red vine rasps and the rank leaves fall,
And the clock-stroke drowns his prayer?

II

The wee babe wails, and the storm grows loud,
Nor deeper the dark of the night may be,
For the lightning's claw, with a great wet cloud,
Hath wiped the moon and the wild-eyed crowd
Of the stars out wrathfully.

Knuckled and kinked as the hunchback shade
Of a thorn-tree bendeth the beldam old
Over the couch where the mother-maid,
With her prayerful eyes and the babe are laid,
Waiting the doom untold.

"Mother, O Mother, I only crave Mercy for him and the babe—not me!"
"Hush! for it maketh my brain to rave
Of my two white shrouds, and my one wide grave,
And a mound for my children three."

THE WITCH OF ERKMURDEN

“Mother, O Mother, I only pray
Pity for him who is son to thee
And more than my brother.—” “Wilt hush, I say!

Though I meet thee not at the Judgment Day,
I will bury my children three!”

“Then hark! O Mother, I hear his cry—
Hear his curse from the church-tower now,—
‘Ride thou witch till thy hate shall die,
Yet hell as heaven eternally
Be sealed to such as thou!’”

An infant’s wail—then a laugh, god wot,
That strangled the echoes of deepest hell;
And a thousand shuttles of lightning shot,
And the moon bulged out like a great red blot,
And a shower of blood-stars fell.

III

There is one wide grave scooped under the eaves—
Under the eaves as they weep and weep ;
And, veiled by the mist that the dead storm weaves,
The hag bends low, and the earth receives
Mother and child asleep.

There's the print of the hand at either throat,
And the frothy ooze at the lips of each,
But both smile up where the new stars float,
And the moon sails out like a silver boat
Unloosed from a stormy beech.

IV

Bright was the morn when the sexton gray
Twirled the rope of the old church bell,—
But it answered not, and he tugged away—
And lo, at his feet a dead man lay—
Dropped down with a single knell.

THE WITCH OF ERKMURDEN

And the scared wight found in the lean hand
gripped,

A scrip which read: "O the grave is wide,
But it empty waits, for the low eaves dripped
Their prayerful tears, and the three Sprites slipped Away with my babe and bride."

LAUGHTER

WITHIN the cosiest corner of my dreams

He sits, high-throned above all gods that be

Portrayed in marble-cold mythology,

Since from his joyous eyes a twinkle gleams

So warm with life and light it ever seems

Spraying in mists of sunshine over me,

And mingled with such rippling ecstasy

As overleaps his lips in laughing streams.

Ho! look on him, and say if he be old

Or youthful! Hand in hand with gray old Time

He toddled when an infant; and, behold!—

He hath not aged, but to the lusty prime

Of babyhood—his brow a trifle bold—

His hair a ravelled nimbus of gray gold.

ERE I WENT MAD

ERE I went mad—

O you may never guess what dreams I had!
Such hosts of happy things did come to me.
One time, it seemed, I knelt at some one's knee,
My wee lips threaded with a strand of prayer,
With kinks of kisses in it here and there
To stay and tangle it the while I knit
A mother's long-forgotten name in it.
Be sure, I dreamed it all, but I was glad
—Ere I went mad!

Ere I went mad,
I dreamed there came to me a fair-faced lad,
Who led me by the wrist where blossoms grew
In grassy lands, and where the skies were blue

ERE I WENT MAD

As his own eyes. And he did lisp and sing,
And weave me wreaths where I sat marvelling
What little prince it was that crowned me queen
And caught my face so cunningly between His dimple-dinted hands, and kept me glad
—Ere I went mad!

Ere I went mad,
Not even winter weather made me sad—
I dreamed, indeed, the skies were ne'er so dull
That his smile might not make them beautiful.
And now, it seemed, he had grown O so fair
And straight and strong that, when he smoothed
 my hair,
I felt as any lily with drooped head
That leans, in fields of grain unharvested,
By some lithe stalk of barley—pure and glad
—Ere I went mad!

ERE I WENT MAD

Ere I went mad,
The last of all the happy dreams I had
Was of a peerless king—a conqueror—
Who crowned me with a kiss, and throned me for
One hour! Ah, God of Mercy! what a dream
To tincture life with! Yet I made no scream
As I awakened—with these eyes you see,
That may not smile till love comes back to me,
And lulls me back to those old dreams I had
—Ere I went mad.

ETERNITY

O WHAT a weary while it is to stand,
Telling the countless ages o'er and o'er,
Till all the finger-tips held out before
Our dazzled eyes by heaven's starry hand
Drop one by one, yet at some dread command
Are held again, and counted evermore!
How feverish the music seems to pour
Along the throbbing veins of anthems grand!
And how the cherubim sing on and on—
The seraphim and angels—still in white—
Still harping—still enraptured—far withdrawn
In hovering armies tranced in endless flight!
. . . God's mercy! is there never dusk or dawn,
Or any crumb of gloom to feed upon?

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

A KING—estranged from his loving Queen

By a foolish royal whim—

Tired and sick of the dull routine

Of matters surrounding him—

Issued a mandate in this wise:—

*“The dower of my daughter’s hand
I will give to him who holds this prize,
The strangest thing in the land.”*

But the King, sad sooth! in this grim decree

Had a motive low and mean;—

’Twas a royal piece of chicanery,

To harry and spite the Queen—

For King though he was, and beyond compare

He had ruled all things save one—

Then blamed the Queen that his only heir

Was a daughter—not a son.

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

The girl had grown, in the mother's care,
Like a bud in the shine and shower
That drinks of the wine of the balmy air
Till it blooms into matchless flower;
Her waist was the rose's stem that bore
The flower—and the flower's perfume—
That ripens on, till it bulges o'er,
With its wealth of bud and bloom.

And she had a lover—lowly sprung,—
But a purer, nobler heart
Never spake in a courtlier tongue
Or wooed with a dearer art:
And the fair pair paled at the King's decree;
But the smiling Fates contrived
To have them wed, in a secrecy
That the Queen herself connived—

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

While the grim King's heralds scoured the land
And the countries round about,
Shouting aloud, at the King's command,
A challenge to knave or lout,
Prince or peasant,—“The mighty King
Would have ye understand
That he who shows him the strangest thing
Shall have his daughter's hand!”

And thousands flocked to the royal throne,
Bringing a thousand things
Strange and curious;—One, a bone—
The hinge of a fairy's wings:
And one, the glass of a mermaid queen,
Gemmed with a diamond dew,
Where, down in its reflex, dimly seen,
Her face smiled out at you.

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

One brought a cluster of some strange date,
With a subtle and searching tang
That seemed, as you tasted, to penetrate
The heart like a serpent's fang;
And back you fell for a spell entranced,
As cold as a corpse of stone,
And heard your brains, as they laughed and danced
And talked in an undertone.

One brought a bird that could whistle a tune
So piercingly pure and sweet,
That tears would fall from the eyes of the moon
In dewdrops at its feet;
And the winds would sigh at the sweet refrain,
Till they swooned in an ecstasy,
To awaken again in a hurricane
Of riot and jubilee.

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

One brought a lute that was wro't of a shell
Luminous as the shine
Of a new-born star in a dewy dell,—
And its strings were strands of wine
That sprayed at the Fancy's touch and fused,
As your listening spirit leant
Drunken through with the airs that oozed
From the o'ersweet instrument.

One brought a tablet of ivory
Whereon no thing was writ,—
But, at night—and the dazzled eyes would see
Flickering lines o'er it,—
And each, as you read from the magic tome,
Lightened and died in flame,
And the memory held but a golden poem
Too beautiful to name.

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

Till it seemed all marvels that ever were known
Or dreamed of under the sun
Were brought and displayed at the royal throne,
And put by, one by one ;—
Till a graybeard monster came to the King—
Haggard and wrinkled and old—
And spread to his gaze this wondrous thing,—
A gossamer veil of gold.—

Strangely marvellous—mocking the gaze
Like a tangle of bright sunshine,
Dipping a million glittering rays
In a baptism divine :
And a maiden, sheened in this gauze attire—
Sifting a glance of her eye—
Dazzled men's souls with a fierce desire
To kiss and caress her and—die.

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

And the grim King swore by his royal beard
That the veil had won the prize,
While the gray old monster blinked and leered
With his lashless, red-rimmed eyes,
As the fainting form of the princess fell,
And the mother's heart went wild,
Throbbing and swelling a muffled knell
For the dead hopes of her child.

But her clouded face with a faint smile shone,
As suddenly, through 'the throng,
Pushing his way to the royal throne,
A fair youth strode along,
While a strange smile hovered about his eyes,
As he said to the grim old King:—
"The veil of gold must lose the prize;
For I have a stranger thing."

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

He bent and whispered a sentence brief;

But the monarch shook his head,

With a look expressive of unbelief—

“It can’t be so,” he said;

“Or give me proof; and I, the King,

Give you my daughter’s hand.—

For certes THAT is a stranger thing—

The strangest thing in the land!”

Then the fair youth, turning, caught the Queen

In a rapturous caress,

While his lithe form towered in lordly mien,

As he said in a brief address:—

“My fair bride’s mother is this; and, lo,

As you stare in your royal awe,

By this pure kiss do I proudly show

A love for a mother-in-law!”

THE SPEEDING OF THE KING'S SPITE

Then a thaw set in on the old King's mood,
And a sweet Spring freshet came
Into his eyes, and his heart renewed
Its love for the favored dame:
But often he has been heard to declare
That "he never could clearly see
How, in the deuce, such a strange affair
Could have ended so happily!"

THE ASSASSIN

FLING him amongst the cobbles of the street
Midmost along a mob's most turbid tide;
Stun him with tumult upon every side—
Wrangling of hoarsened voices that repeat
His awful guilt and howl for vengeance meet;
Let white-faced women stare, all torrid-eyed,
With hair blown forward, and with jaws dropped wide,
And some face like his mother's glimmer sweet
An instant in the hot core of his eyes.
Then snatch him with claw hands, and thong his head
That he may look no way but toward the skies
That glower lividly and crackle red,—
There let some knuckled fist of lightning rise—
Draw backward flickeringly and knock him dead.

A VARIATION

I AM tired of this!

Nothing else but loving!

Nothing else but kiss and kiss,

Coo, and turtle-doving!

Can't you change the order some?

Hate me just a little—come!

Lay aside your “dears,”

“Darlings,” “kings,” and “princes!”—

Call me knave, and dry your tears—

Nothing in me winces,—

Call me something low and base—

Something that will suit the case!

A VARIATION

Wish I had your eyes

And their drooping lashes!

I would dry their teary lies

Up with lightning-flashes—

Make your sobbing lips unsheathe

All the glitter of your teeth!

Can't you lift one word—

With some pang of laughter—

Louder than the drowsy bird

Crooning 'neath the rafter?

Just one bitter word, to shriek

Madly at me as I speak!

How I hate the fair

Beauty of your forehead!

How I hate your fragrant hair!

How I hate the torrid

Touches of your splendid lips,

And the kiss that drips and drips!

A VARIATION

Ah, you pale at last!

And your face is lifted
Like a white sail to the blast,
And your hands are shifted
Into fists: and, towering thus,
You are simply glorious!

Now before me looms,
Something more than human;
Something more than beauty blooms
In the wrath of Woman—
Something to bow down before
Reverently and adore.

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

How tired I am! I sink down all alone
Here by the wayside of the Present. Lo,
Even as a child I hide my face and moan—
A little girl that may no farther go:
The path above me only seems to grow
More rugged, climbing still, and ever briered
With keener thorns of pain than these below;
And O the bleeding feet that falter so
And are so very tired!

Why, I have journeyed from the far-off Lands
Of Babyhood—where baby-lilies blew
Their trumpets in mine ears, and filled my hands
With treasures of perfume and honey-dew,
And where the orchard shadows ever drew
Their cool arms round me when my cheeks were fired
With too much joy, and lulled mine eyelids to,
And only let the starshine trickle through
In sprays, when I was tired!

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

Yet I remember, when the butterfly
Went flickering about me like a flame
That quenched itself in roses suddenly,
How oft I wished that I might blaze the same,
And in some rose-wreath nestle with my name,
While all the world looked on it and admired.—
Poor moth!—Along my wavering flight toward fame
The winds drive backward, and my wings are lame
And broken, bruised and tired!

I hardly know the path from those old times;
I know at first it was a smother one
Than this that hurries past me now, and climbs
So high, its far cliffs even hide the sun
And shroud in gloom my journey scarce begun.
I could not do quite all the world required—
I could not do quite all I should have done,
And in my eagerness I have outrun
My strength—and I am tired. . . .

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

Just tired. But when of old I had the stay
Of mother-hands, O very sweet indeed
It was to dream that all the weary way
I should but follow where I now must lead—
For long ago they left me in my need,
And, groping on alone, I tripped and mired
Among rank grasses where the serpents breed
In knotted coils about the feet of speed.—
There first it was I tired!

And yet I staggered on, and bore my load
Right gallantly: The sun, in summer-time,
In lazy belts came slipping down the road
To woo me on, with many a glimmering rhyme
Rained from the golden rim of some fair clime,
That, hovering beyond the clouds, inspired
My failing heart with fancies so sublime
I half forgot my path of dust and grime,
Though I was growing tired.

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

And there were many voices cheering me :

I listened to sweet praises where the wind
Went laughing o'er my shoulders gleefully
And scattering my love-songs far behind ;—
Until, at last, I thought the world so kind—
So rich in all my yearning soul desired—
So generous—so loyally inclined,
I grew to love and trust it. . . . I was blind—
Yea, blind as I was tired !

And yet one hand held me in creature-touch :

And O, how fain it was, how true and strong,
How it did hold my heart up like a crutch,
Till, in my dreams, I joyed to walk along
The toilsome way, contented with a song—
'Twas all of earthly things I had acquired,
And 'twas enough, I feigned, or right or wrong,
Since, binding me to man—a mortal thong—
It stayed me, growing tired. . . .

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

Yea, I had e'en resigned me to the strait
Of earthly rulership—had bowed my head
Acceptant of the master-mind—the great
One lover—lord of all,—the perfected
Kiss-comrade of my soul;—had stammering said
My prayers to him;—all—all that he desired
I rendered sacredly as we were wed.—
Nay—nay!—'twas but a myth I worshippèd.—
And—God of love!—how tired!

For, O my friends, to lose the latest grasp—
To feel the last hope slipping from its hold—
To feel the one fond hand within your clasp
Fall slack, and loosen with a touch so cold
Its pressure may not warm you as of old
Before the light of love had thus expired—
To know your tears are worthless, though they rolled
Their torrents out in molten drops of gold.—
God's pity! I am tired!

AN OUT-WORN SAPPHO

And I must rest.—Yet do not say “She died,”
In speaking of me, sleeping here alone.
I kiss the grassy grave I sink beside,
And close mine eyes in slumber all mine own:
Hereafter I shall neither sob nor moan
Nor murmur one complaint;—all I desired,
And failed in life to find, will now be known—
So let me dream. Good night! And on the stone
Say simply: She was tired.

AFTER DEATH

AN! this delights me more than words could tell,—
To just lie stark and still, with folded hands
That tremble not at greeting or farewell,
Nor fumble foolishly in loosened strands
Of woman's hair, nor grip with jealousy
To find her face turned elsewhere smilingly.

With slumbrous lids, and mouth in mute repose,
And lips that yearn no more for any kiss—
Though it might drip, as from the red-lipped rose
The dewdrop drips, 'twere not so sweet as this Unutterable density of rest
That reigns in every vein of brain and breast!

AFTER DEATH

And thus—soaked with still laughter through and through—

I lie here dreaming of the forms that pass.
Above my grave, to drop, with tears, a few
White flowers that but curdle the green grass;—
And if they read such sermons, they could see
How I do pity them that pity me.

TO THE WINE-GOD MERLUS

[A Toast of Jucklet's]

Ho! ho! thou jolly god, with kinkèd lips
And laughter-streaming eyes, thou liftest up
The heart of me like any wassail-cup,
And from its teeming brim, in foaming drips,
Thou blowest all my cares. I cry to thee,
Between the sips:—Drink long and lustily;
Drink thou my ripest joys, my richest mirth,
My maddest staves of wanton minstrelsy;
Drink every song I've tinkered here on earth
With any patch of music; drink! and be
Thou drainer of my soul, and to the lees
Drink all my lover-thrills and ecstasies;
And with a final gulp—ho! ho!—drink me,
And roll me o'er thy tongue eternally.

THE QUEST

I AM looking for Love. Has he passed this way,
With eyes as blue as the skies of May,
And a face as fair as the summer dawn?—
You answer back, but I wander on,—
For you say: “Oh, yes; but his eyes were gray,
And his face as dim as a rainy day.”

Good friends, I query, I search for Love;
His eyes are as blue as the skies above,
And his smile as bright as the midst of May
When the truce-bird pipes: Has he passed this way?
And one says: “Ay; but his face, alack!
Frowned as he passed, and his eyes were black.”

THE QUEST

O who will tell me of Love? I cry!
His eyes are as blue as the mid-May sky,
And his face as bright as the morning sun;
And you answer and mock me, every one,
That his eyes were dark, and his face was wan,
And he passed you frowning and wandered on.

But stout of heart will I onward fare,
Knowing my Love is beyond—somewhere,—
The Love I seek, with the eyes of blue,
And the bright, sweet smile unknown of you;
And on from the hour his trail is found
I shall sing sonnets the whole year round.

SONG OF PARTING

SAY farewell, and let me go;

Shatter every vow!

All the future can bestow

Will be welcome now!

And if this fair hand I touch

I have worshipped overmuch,

It was my mistake—and so,

Say farewell, and let me go.

Say farewell, and let me go:

Murmur no regret,

Stay your tear-drops ere they flow—

Do not waste them yet!

They might pour as pours the rain,

And not wash away the pain:—

I have tried them and I know.—

Say farewell, and let me go.

SONG OF PARTING

Say farewell, and let me go:

Think me not untrue—

True as truth is, even so

I am true to you!

If the ghost of love may stay

Where my fond heart dies to-day,

I am with you alway—so,

Say farewell, and let me go.

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

The Romancer, the Poet, and the Bookman

I

THE ROMANCER

THE Romancer's a nightingale,—
The moon wanes dewy-dim
And all the stars grow faint and pale
In listening to him.—
To him the plot least plausible
Is of the most avail,—
He simply masters it because
He takes it by the tale.

*O he's a nightingale,—
His theme will never fail—
It gains applause of all—because
He takes it by the tale!*

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

The Romancer's a nightingale:—

His is the sweetest note—

The sweetest, woe-begonest wail

Poured out of mortal throat:

So, glad or sad, he ever draws

Our best godspeed and hail;

He highest lifts his theme—because

He takes it by the tale.

O he's a nightingale,—

His theme will never fail—

It gains applause of all—because

He takes it by the tale!

II

THE POET

The bobolink he sings a single song,

Right along,—

And the robin sings another, all his own—

One alone;

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

And the whippoorwill, and bluebird,
And the cockadoodle-doo-bird ;—
But the mocking-bird he sings in every tone
Ever known,
Or chirrup-note of merriment or moan.

*So the Poet he's the mocking-bird of men,—
He steals his songs and sings them o'er again ;
And yet beyond believing
They're the sweeter for his thieving.—
So we'll howl for Mister Mocking-bird
And have him out again !*

It's mighty fond we are of bobolinks,
And chewinks ;
And we dote on dinky robins, quite a few—
Yes, we do ;
And we love the dove, and bluebird,
And the cockadoodle-doo-bird,—
But the mocking-bird's the bird for me and you,
Through and through,
Since he sings as everybody wants him to.

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

*Ho! the Poet he's the mocking-bird of men,—
He steals his songs and sings them o'er again;
And yet beyond believing
They're the sweeter for his thieving.—
So we'll howl for Mister Mocking-bird
And have him out again!*

III

BOOKMAN'S CATCH

The Bookman he's a humming-bird—
His feasts are honey-fine,—
 (With hi! hilloo!
 And clover-dew
 And roses lush and rare!)

His roses are the phrase and word
Of olden tomes divine;
 (With hi! and ho!
 And pinks ablow
 And posies everywhere!)

The Bookman he's a humming-bird,—
He steals from song to song—

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

He scents the ripest blooming rhyme,
And takes his heart along
And sacks all sweets of bursting verse
And ballads, throng on throng.
(With ho! and hey!
And brook and brae,
And brinks of shade and shine!)
A humming-bird the Bookman is—
Though cumbrous, gray and grim,—
(With hi! hilloo!
And honey-dew
And odors musty-rare!)

He bends him o'er that page of his
As o'er the rose's rim.
(With hi! and ho!
And pinks aglow
And roses everywhere!)

Ay, he's the featest humming-bird,
On airiest of wings
He poises pendent o'er the poem
That blossoms as it sings—

THREE SEVERAL BIRDS

God friend him as he dips his beak

In such delicious things!

(With ho! and hey!

And world away

And only dreams for him!)
